Italian Tank Columns, Trapped by Greeks, Desperately Trying To Reach Yugoslavia

Duce's Invaders On Run Over 100-Mile Front

Greece's Troops Hammer at Gates of Koritza; Score Other Gains.

By the Associated Press.
ATHENS, Nov. 17.—The Greek army is hammering at the very gates of Koritza, largest and most important city in Italian-conquered Albania, and occupation of this jumping-off place for the Fascist invasion of Greece is believed imminent, a government spokesman announced tonight.

In the van of the Italian retreat from this vital center, 10 miles inside Albania, were 130 Italian tanks, reported seeking desperately to escape into neighboring Yugoslavia.

Many Tanks Captured.—Some reports said the fleeing tank columns already had crossed into Yugoslavia, but the government spokesman said there was no confirmation of this.

(Reports from the Yugoslav frontier said Yugoslav authorities had interned a number of Italian armored cars and tanks which crossed the border, and that Italy had demanded their release, the United Press said.)

The tanks were reported cut off from other Italian forces and many of them were said to have fallen into Greek hands.

"You must realize how difficult the occupation of Mount Moravia, three miles from Koritza, was yesterday," said the Greek spokesman. "Since then we may say that we are fighting the enemy rearward before the gates of Koritza."

"Greece's troops, by brilliant action, succeeded in reaching the gates of Koritza and are threatening the city, the most important in Albania."

In the Pindus sector, southwest of Koritza, the Greeks were said officially to be fighting deeper and deeper into Albania.

From the top of the 100-mile front to the Ionian seacoast the Greeks declared the Italians were on the run under a merciless pounding by land, sea and air.

Greek Ships Active.—The Greek coastal advance, based at the newly recaptured town of Filiates, is reportedly pushing into the low hills around Konissol Bay. It is said to be supported by Admiral Kavadais, whose destroyer flotilla is shelling the Italian retreat along the roads, the United Press reports.

(It was disclosed that the flotilla Thursday night forced its way through the Strait of Otranto and shelled the Italian base of Sasano Island and returned home without meeting an Italian warship.)

Argentina Opposes U. S. Defense Plan

By the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Nov. 17.—A high official said today Argentina is "not disposed to co-operate in any common (hemisphere) plan until we consider danger of attack is actually here."

Informed sources said the government's feeling is that plans of its neighbors, Paraguay and Uruguay, to construct air or naval bases with United States assistance, which might be available to all American nations, would be an intrusion of Argentina's natural sphere of influence.

Observers of Argentina's policies, in which she frequently has taken a lone stand in Pan-American affairs, said the program for hemisphere defense is likely to result in one of two things: Argentina will attempt to block development of such co-operative defense bases, or she will develop her own naval and aerial facilities to balance the activities of her neighbors.

"The declarations at Havana and Panama were signed by all American nations only because they were very general," the high official asserted. "Had the declarations signified definite compromises, all countries would have thought long before signing. Argentina intends to contribute to continental defense by defending herself."

Asked what the Argentine reaction would be to foreign aggression against another American nation, he replied:

"It would be necessary that we study the specific case . . . If the aggression was directed against a nation far away in such form or at such distance as not to threaten Argentina directly, we would have to study the matter."

Dr. Hancock, 'Enemy' Ships Who Founded Declared U. S. Hospital, Dies Patrol Vessels

Atlanta Surgeon Retired Two Years Ago Because of Ill Health.

Dr. Thomas H. Hancock, 71, founder of the old Atlanta hospital and former chief of the Georgia Power company and the Southern Railway system, died early last night at his residence, 300 Crumley street, after an illness of nearly two years.

Dr. Hancock, a resident of Atlanta for nearly half a century, was a native of Albemarle county, Virginia, receiving his M. D. degree from the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Columbia university in 1891, internship at the Polyclinic hospital in New York. He moved to Atlanta in 1893 to enter private practice and a year later married Miss Marie Louise Price, of Mobile.

In 1907, he founded the Atlanta hospital, which he served as president and chief surgeon for a quarter of a century, retiring two years ago because of ill health. During his long career he served as chief surgeon for the Southern Railway, and consulting surgeon for the Seaboard Air Line railway, and chief surgeon of the Georgia Power company.

Dr. Hancock was a member of American Warships May Serve as Escort of British Freighter.

TAMPICO, Mexico, Nov. 17.—(UP)—The commander of a Mexican gunboat said tonight that the three warships off Tampico early Saturday, which captains of four German freighters mistook as British, resulting in scuttling of one of the merchantmen, were United States destroyers, presumably on patrol.

The German ships Phrygia, Orinoco, Iderwald and Rhein left here late Friday night, after being in port since the European war broke out, in an apparent attempt to reach friendly European ports. The Phrygia was scuttled when the warships were sighted and the others ran back to Tampico.

Lieutenant Cuahutemoc Perez Zavala, commander of the Mexican gunboat Queretaro, which was at the scene, said he had identified the warships as United States destroyers. One bore the number 210, another 233 and he was unable to determine the number of the third.

RAF Chief Sent To U.S. for Duty In Big Shakeup

British Army Given Own Air Force After Long Battle.

By the Associated Press.
LONDON, Nov. 17.—A far-reaching shuffle of the Royal Air Force command, detaching its present fighter command chief for special but unexplained duty in the United States and giving the British army its own air force after years of bitter controversy, was announced tonight by the air ministry.

Air Chief Marshal Sir Hugh Dowding, 58, who has been mainly responsible for the defense of Britain against German air attacks, will be sent to the United States at the special request of Lord Beaverbrook, minister of aircraft production, the announcement said.

Succeeding him in the key post of air officer commander in chief of the fighter command will be Air Vice Marshal W. S. Douglas, 47, who was made an air marshal simultaneously with his promotion.

Chief for Middle East.

Air Vice Marshal A. T. Harris, 48, was named to replace Douglas as deputy chief of air staff under Chief of Air Staff Air Marshal Sir Charles Portal.

Air Vice Marshal O. T. Boyd, 51, was promoted to air marshal and made deputy air officer commanding the middle east command.

Air Marshal Sir Arthur Sheridan Barratt, 49, who commanded the British air forces in France until the French collapse, was named air officer in command of a new "army co-operation command" which will work closely with land forces.

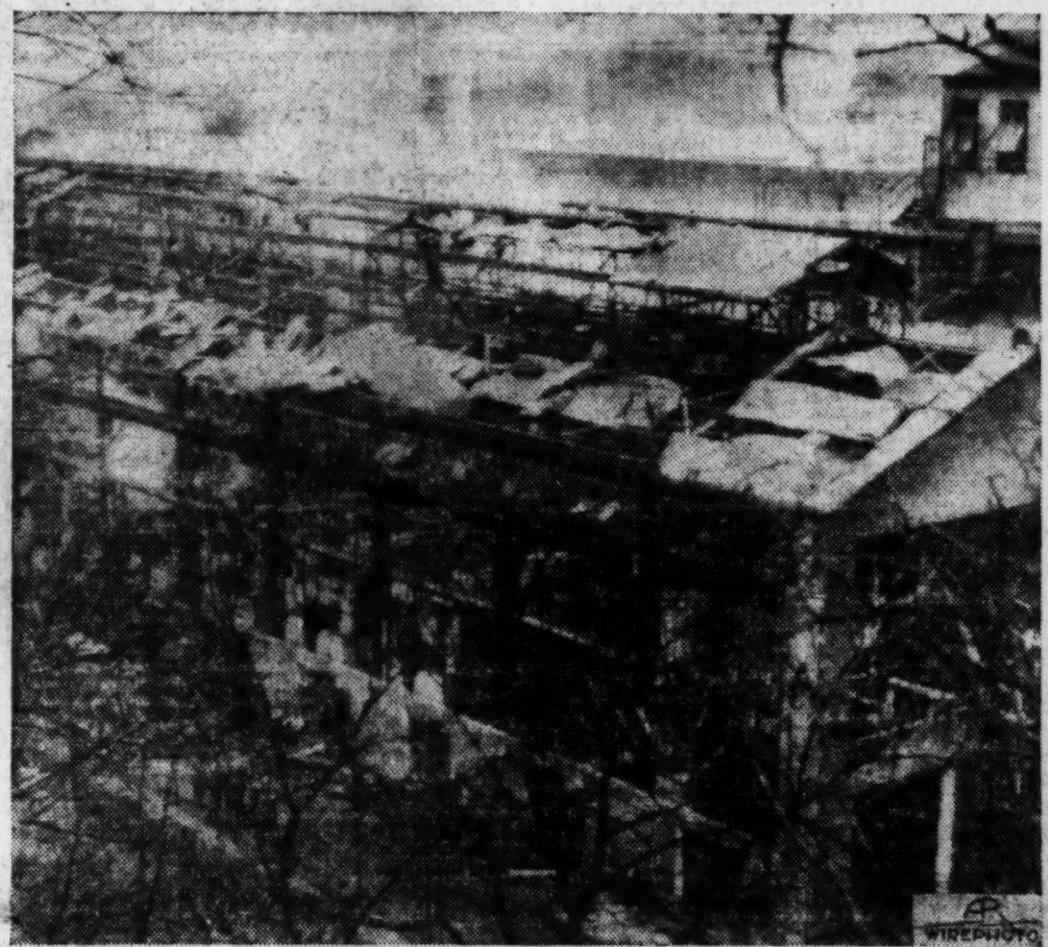

The air command shifts carry out a previous arrangement to give the army its own air force and capitalizes on lessons learned from France's collapse.

Work With Army.

"A principal feature of the new arrangements is the decision to set up a command of the RAF to be called the army co-operation command which will comprise all squadrons allotted to the army in the United Kingdom together with associated training units," the air ministry said.

"An agreement in principle was reached between the army and the RAF commands several weeks ago when the RAF met the army demand for complete control of the air force with an offer to turn over several units."

The authoritative press association described the army co-operation command as an "admirable compromise."

AFL Is Ready To Talk Peace With Rival CIO

Settlement Believed Possible Through Efforts of Conflicting Groups in Lewis' Unit.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 17.—(AP)—The American Federation of Labor, sharply keyed to events its leaders think could mark a turning point in the labor movement, opens its 60th and "most far-reaching" convention tomorrow.

Ready to talk peace with the turbulent Congress of Industrial Organizations meeting at the same time in Atlantic City, the AFL planned to start its sessions tranquilly while watching CIO developments involving President John L. Lewis' promise to resign.

But although the AFL executive council today announced willingness to discuss peace with the rival group, Vice President Matthew Woll, believing a settlement might ultimately be reached through the individual efforts of "one of the several groups now within the CIO and in conflict with one another," said in an interview:

"No one can predict the outcome of the impending conflict within the CIO. It is safe, however, to believe that the resultant consequences will be a weakening and possible disintegrating of the CIO."

(AFL executive council blames leader of CIO for failure to make peace. Story on Page 7.)

Lewis Says U. S. Faced By Post-War Collapse

CIO President Urges Adoption of His Proposal To Meet Threatening Crisis.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 17.—(AP)—John L. Lewis, caustic critic of the administration's foreign and domestic policies, warned CIO's national convention today of the dangers of a post-war "economic collapse" and advocated a program to meet it.

"This program calls for a progressive raising of real wages and purchasing power," Lewis said in his annual report, "for the absorption of all the unemployed through reduced working hours and expanded production, and for legislation to insure security and opportunity for young and old people, the unemployed and all the needy who are not otherwise provided for."

The CIO, he declared, should push more vigorously for the adoption of the program. He said the first step was through union organization.

Lewis devoted sections of his report to criticism of the defense commission's labor policy, the FBI, and other federal activities.

The CIO leader disclosed nothing about the organization's membership or finances.

With the stage set for his self-appointed retirement as CIO president, a course he chose for himself if President Roosevelt was re-elected, Lewis declared that CIO's position on national defense called not only for defense against foreign invaders, but also the "defense of our living standards and our liberties from the attacks of reactionary interests which would take advantage for their own selfish purposes of the country's emergency."

(Pre-convention test of strength between partisans of Lewis and Hillman postponed. Story on Page 7.)

Chimneys Fall In Mysterious New Explosion

Windows Shattered in Area; $250,000 Damage Reported.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 17.—An unexplained explosion, the third in a week in a plant of the American Cyanamid and Chemical Corporation, today badly damaged half of one large building at the corporation's nearby Bridgeville works, injuring two men, neither seriously.

Oscar Luft, plant manager, said 100 to 150 workmen were in the company's Selden division works at Bridgeville, 25 of them in the shattered building when the blast let go at 9:40 a. m. (Atlanta time).

$250,000 Damage.—The concussion ripped through part of the main 600 by 100-foot building of the 85-acre chemical works, causing damage officially reported to county detectives at $250,000. The plant manager said the corporation did not have defense contracts.

Luft termed it "extremely fortunate many more" of the workmen were not injured by the avalanche of great chunks of falling steel and concrete that dropped amid terrific din.

The blast shook nearby houses, shattered windows of homes in the district and toppled chimneys. It was reported by residents as far away as Mt. Lebanon, five miles east and midway between Bridgeville and Pittsburgh.

Workmen Treated.

Luft identified the injured as John Pinto, 45, and Calvin Herron, 40, both of near Bridgeville. Pinto was treated for a dislocated shoulder and Herron for cuts and bruises.

Luft described the building, which he said was "half demolished," as "flexible, of brick, steel and concrete construction." It was one of 45 structures on the grounds.

The manager described the plant as one employing the catalytic oxidation of naphthalene process to manufacture phthalic anhydride, a raw material used in chemicals, especially for synthetic resins.

FIRE DESTROYS DEFENSE PLANT

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Nov. 17.—(AP)—Fire today destroyed the small plant of the Pennsylvania Chemical Company which, the owner asserted, was working on a government order for incendiary bombs.

Michael Bozich, owner of the plant, charged that fire was "arson with intention of sabotage."

In charging sabotage, Bozich, who was asleep in the building at the time of the fire, asserted that the glass of the window nearest the start of the blaze was found inside the ruins while glass of other windows had been found outside.

Bozich said he had an order to deliver bombs to the United States Army at the Aberdeen, Md., proving grounds November 20. He asserted tests had proven his bombs, one pound in weight and 15 inches long, were three times more effective than any others in use.

WAR BIRDS FOR BRITAIN—Awaiting clearing weather to start on a delivery flight to New York, en route to Great Britain, for use in the war with the Axis powers, a group of eight Douglas bombers is shown lined up outside the Douglas El Segundo plant, where they were built under an English contract. The planes already bear the insignia of the British air force and are camouflaged, ready to plunge into the fray.

It's Good News For Everybody On Thursday

Something Big, Exciting Waits Constitution Readers.

A good news story tells "Who, what, where, when, why, and how."

This is a good news story. For instance—

"Who?"
You, and you, and you, and you. Papa and Mama and Sister Sue. People from the North Side and people from the West Side. People from the South Side and people from Griffin and Baxley and Commerce and Locust Grove and Madison and Cartersville and LaGrange and West Point and everywhere beyond and between.

"What?"
Something big, and exciting. Like a Christmas present you didn't expect. Like a legacy left from a rich old Uncle.

"Where?"
East Side, West Side, all around the town.

"When?"
Soon. Sooner than you expect. In just a little while, in fact.

"Why?"
Because it's Thanksgiving time, and nearly Christmas when people feel gay and generous and want to make other people happy.

"How?"
Now, that's the deep, dark secret that can't be told—till Thursday's Constitution comes.

Christmas Packages To Be Sent English Tots

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(P)—The Red Cross said today that its junior members had prepared more than 30,000 Christmas packages to be sent to children in England. Each contains 10 to 12 small gifts of toys and toilet articles.

About 30,000 other packages will be sent to children in Greenland, Peru, Chile, Argentina, Guayaquil, Mexico, China, Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Philippines, Alaska and Guam.

Spain Warns Uruguay On Ceding Bases

Transfer Would Be Act of Suicide, Falangist Paper Says.

MADRID, Nov. 17.—(P)—The Falangist newspaper "A rabia," commenting today on what it said were reports Uruguay may cede naval and air bases to the United States, labeled such a transfer "an act of suicide" against which the shades of the old Spanish conquerors would protest.

"If Uruguay ceded Punta Del Este to the United States," the paper said, "it would be as though she threw herself from those beautiful rocks into an abyss."

(The Uruguayan cabinet has unanimously approved negotiations to treat on the subject of United States aid in developing bases which would be open to other American nations for defense.)

Meanwhile the Madrid press announced the early organization of the "House of America," intended to strengthen Spain's bonds with Latin America along cultural, social and other lines.

Chiefs of states of all Spanish and Portuguese-speaking countries are to be invited to serve as honorary presidents. Eventually, it is planned, the "house" will have branches throughout Latin America.

The program is to include the organization of conferences, exchange of students and literature, establishment of a permanent Hispanic exposition, operation of a radio station and publication of a Spanish-American review.

URUGUAYAN PRESIDENT URGES "BROTHERHOOD"

SAN JOSE, Uruguay, Nov. 17.—(P)—President Alfredo Baldomir tonight defended Uruguay's right to discuss and establish Pan-American defense bases with the assistance of the United States.

Speaking at a dinner in his honor, the President urged a "strict brotherhood of American nations."

He also declared that Uruguay must accept constitutional reforms to eliminate an equal division of the senate and thus do away with a senatorial stalemate which is blocking sections of his program.

He charged the "Herrerista" group, followers of Senator Luis Alberto Herrera—frequently linked with nationalistic rightist movements—with attempting to use the constitutional reform and establishment of defense bases for its own political ends.

Some of his audience said they interpreted the linking of the two questions to mean Baldomir is ready to force the issue on constitutional reforms in an attempt to smash a stalemate over the question of co-operative bases.

That's No Earthquake That's Britain's RAF

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—(P)—The British Broadcasting corporation in a report heard here by CBS said tonight that the official German news agency announced there was a "short earthquake" at Boulogne, France, last night.

And the British radio added:

"No seismologist has been able to trace it, however, the reason being that seismographs do not record earthquakes caused by the Royal Air Force."

Zavala said he received the impression that one of the American destroyers was headed towards the Rhein before the German ships started back to Tampico. Asked about such a possible action, the Mexican diplomat said that it was the duty of vessels engaged in the pan-American neutrality patrol to identify strange ships and that they may go alongside or signal such craft to obtain their identity.

NAVY DEPARTMENT DECLINES COMMENT
WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(P)—The Navy Department tonight declined comment on the statement of a Mexican gunboat commander that the three warships off Tampico, Mexico, which the captains of four German freighters mistook as British, were United States destroyers.

They refused to discuss the possibility that American ships of the neutrality patrol were off the Mexican coast, explaining that the navy does not discuss the movements or the location of its ships or planes.

The Mexican commander claimed that two of the ships he identified as American were numbered 210 and 233. James Fighting Ships, official guide of the world's navies, lists the U. S. destroyers Broome and Glimmer, both over age, as bearing these numerals respectively. It could not be learned, however, whether these two vessels were among the 30 transferred to Britain in the destroyer-for-bases deal.

'Enemy' Ships Axis and Spain Declared U. S. To Hold Parley Patrol Vessels On War Moves

naval attaché in Mexico City refused to comment on Zavala's statement, but would not deny that American warships had been off the Mexican east coast.

Viewed as Escort.
Naval Attaché Commander Wallace Dillon said there were no American warships in Tampico harbor at present and that he did not believe any were expected to call there in the near future.

Prevalent belief was that the Germans mistook searchlight signals of three American destroyers, conversing with the British freighter Olive Bank, for those of a British warship lurking to sink the German vessels, which had nosed cautiously down the Panuco river for a dash to sea.

The prevalent explanation of the signals was that the American warships were arranging to escort the Olive Bank.

There was no evidence that British destroyers were in Tampico waters at the time.

Mexican authorities continued today to investigate the identity of the warships while German quarters in the capital again implied that British or Canadian vessels were involved in the incident.

German sources did not indicate that the German government was preparing to protest.

Zavala said the Queretaro conversed with U. S. Destroyer 233 by blinker signals. The Mexican commander said the two ships were only 220 yards apart but did not indicate the exact position of the destroyer when he encountered her.

On Patrol Duty
Tampico citizens said they understood that American destroyers had been engaged on patrol off Tampico for the past 15 days. They said the ships usually appeared nine miles off shore and the funnels were visible on occasions.

An American diplomatic source in Mexico City who would not deny the presence of the destroyers doubted that any American warship had violated Mexican territorial waters. He suggested that it was "easy to make a mistake in position under such circumstances."

Zavala said he received the impression that one of the American destroyers was headed towards the Rhein before the German ships started back to Tampico. Asked about such a possible action, the Mexican diplomat said that it was the duty of vessels engaged in the pan-American neutrality patrol to identify strange ships and that they may go alongside or signal such craft to obtain their identity.

Nazi Consider Moving War Plants to Russia
LONDON, Nov. 17.—(P)—The diplomatic correspondent of the Sunday Times reported today that Russia is viewing "not unfavorably" what he said was a German proposal to set up Nazi war industries in Soviet centers beyond the range of British bombers.

"There is reason to believe Germany, alarmed by interference caused by RAF raids with her armament, aircraft and naval production, proposes to set up naval shipyards, particularly for submarines and airplane factories in Russia," the correspondent wrote.

French African Coventry Still Port Gives Up Removing Dead To de Gaulle Beneath Ruins

Gentil Surrenders to 'Free' French Forces Without Fighting.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—(P)—An official communique issued by headquarters of the "free" French forces in London announced today that Port Gentil, second town in Gabon, French Equatorial Africa, had surrendered without fighting to the forces of General Charles de Gaulle.

The fall of the town followed the recent surrender, after a battle, of the capital, Libreville. Gentil is at the mouth of the same harbor on which Libreville is located.

The communique said: "The town of the Port of Gentil, second port of Gabon, has surrendered without fighting, two days after Libreville, capital of the colony."

"The whole of Gabon is now part of the French free empire," General de Gaulle visited Libreville on Friday and took immediate steps to insure food supplies for the capital.

"The commander-in-chief of the French free forces received civil and military authorities at the governor's residence and afterwards inspected the troops."

Duce To Make First Wartime Speech Today

Fascist Quarters Indicate Mussolini May Discuss United States.

ROME, Nov. 17.—(UP)—Premier Mussolini will make his first wartime speech tomorrow on the fifth anniversary of the application of sanctions against Italy by the League of Nations for invading Ethiopia.

The last time Il Duce spoke was to declare war against France and Britain.

Although it was confirmed that his words will be broadcast throughout the nation, it was not disclosed from where he will speak. This may be a precaution for the Premier's safety, in view of the British bomb attack on Munich when Adolf Hitler last spoke there.

It was generally believed, however, that he would speak from the balcony of Venice palace, since he is receiving Fascist leaders at the palace at 12:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The speech probably will come after this reception, between 1 and 2 o'clock.

According to Roberto Farinacci, former secretary-general of the Fascist party, the speech will be mainly against British propaganda, especially claims that the British scored heavy damages to the Italian fleet in the raid on Taranto. Well-informed quarters suggested, however, that Il Duce may touch on diplomatic issues with which the United States is concerned.

These quarters pointed out that Italian comment during the past few days, including an editorial today in Mussolini's Popolo d'Italia, significantly attacked the United States for becoming a de facto ally of Britain.

Sweden Next, Says Fugitive From Nazis
SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 17.—(P)—Joachim Joesten, fugitive German newsman who arrived here today aboard the Japanese liner Ginyo Maru, said he believed Sweden was next on the list for German absorption.

No imminent is Sweden's complete domination by Germany that an enemy of the Nazi regime is no longer safe there, Joesten told reporters.

Joesten was stationed in Scandinavia for 10 years. Because of articles to which the Nazi regime took offense, he was forced to flee for his life when Denmark was invaded, he said.

Also aboard the Ginyo Maru, which docked here with 124 European refugees, was Herbert Liebman, a correspondent in the Chicago Tribune office in Berlin. Liebman said he left Berlin on October 1, with just $4 in his pocket—the maximum allowed Jews fleeing the country.

Only seven elderly Germans disembarked here. The rest of the refugees are bound for new homes in Central and South America.

French African Coventry Still Port Gives Up Removing Dead To de Gaulle Beneath Ruins
LONDON, Nov. 17.—(UP)—Elast after blast rocked this already battered industrial city today as German time bombs exploded and demolition squads dynamited buildings made unsafe by the annihilating air bombardment Thursday night.

On what had been the main street of Coventry, a sergeant waved his hand and everybody in sight ducked for cover. A great explosion showered rubble all over the neighborhood. Several blocks away at least 1,000 persons stood, watching the blasting of what remained of homes and business establishments.

Debris In Streets.
One hardly could walk on a street in Coventry without climbing over great mounds of pulverized masonry and glass, entwined with twisted steel girders.

I asked an air raid warden how many were dead in the German raid. He looked pityingly at me and invited me to "come along."

I went. It was an air raid shelter or what had been one. Over it was a layer of reinforced concrete from which steel girders stuck like toothpicks.

"Look under there," the warden said. A huge jack had raised the layer. As I edged forward to peer underneath, the warden reassured me that "it's safe now."

Under the raised layer of concrete were more bodies than I could count. Some of them were not entire bodies.

The warden took me on to other places where "safe shelters" had been. It was much the same at all of them.

Soldiers were working like Trojans, pulling down the walls of buildings after buildings. They brought out the dead as soon as they had made the death-traps safe for the entrance of the living.

As the soldiers worked, dynamiting the walls where danger still lurked, bales of cloth cascaded in the streets, along with cans of food, women's hats and perfume.

Coventry had no gas or electricity or water. Thousands of destitute and homeless persons were fed at mobile canteens. They still had the courage to linger at their town where even the spire of the famous cathedral was tilted at a hazardous angle. Nothing but the spire remained of the building that had been one of Britain's most historic shrines.

250 Bodies Found.
Fires still smoldered here and there. Sometimes small explosions spurted up little geysers from the hot ruins.

Authorities estimated that 250 bodies had been found in the ruins of the city. Casualties—dead and injured—had been placed at 1,000.

A health officer said all precautions were being taken against disease.

It looked strange to see children still playing in some streets. I asked one of them who said his name was Kelly how many bombs he had seen falling. He eyed me gravely and without cracking a smile replied:

"That's very unlucky, sir. We don't count them."

Over your Agent's Shoulder

"HINDSIGHT AND FORESIGHT"
a weekly column by
Holgar J. Johnson
President Institute of Life Insurance

WHILE I am addressing this column especially to the life insurance agent, I hope you will all read it over his shoulder.

"Life Insurance—America's Harvest of Security" was the theme of the Annual Message of Life Insurance last year. During the week of Thanksgiving, our great American harvest festival, I wish we could revive that thought and put it to work constructively.

The job of the life insurance agent is to help people plant and cultivate their future security by taking out, and keeping up, life insurance protection. This is a big job. But there is another job of following through to see that the harvest fulfills its purpose, that the hopes of the policy owner for family security are realized.

Therefore, I suggest that every agent use this occasion to re-check his clients. What does this man really want his insurance to do? Does this wife understand what her husband's insurance is expected to accomplish, so that she is prepared to carry out the plan for family security he created?

And what of the beneficiaries of clients who have died in recent years—can the agent be of any further help to them, with suggestions or guidance?

While this is the sort of thing that the good agent is doing all the time, it seems to me that Thanksgiving week is an especially appropriate time to begin to make doubly sure that no opportunity for service is missed.

Such a checkup of the purposes and benefits of life insurance will help to assure every American family the well-earned rewards of thrift and sacrifice and intelligent planning.

An Issue That You Can't Forget

Girl Elephant And Soldier Say Goodby

'We Must All Sacrifice—Even Alice,' He Philosophizes.

National Guardsman Matt Ferguson said goodbye to his elephant Alice, yesterday and prepared to march away for a year's military training.

Ferguson brought Alice here from his plantation in Camden, S. C., where the two-ton circus belle had been doing the job of a tractor since Ferguson purchased her from Clyde Beatty last spring.

Parting wasn't such sweet sorrow for Ferguson, a gentleman farmer, and Alice, who has been a faithful pet but a big eater.

"Take good care of her," Ferguson told officials of the Atlanta zoo in whose care he left her while he's away learning how to fight. "She likes all the hay and vegetables you can provide. I sort hate to go into the army and leave her behind. But these are serious times and we all must sacrifice—even Alice."

She Has Company

Alice seemed a little sad, but also curious as she eyed Coca, the Atlanta zoo's only elephant until Alice arrived. Coca is a girl elephant, too, and Ferguson thought she might be some comfort to Alice in months to come.

Ferguson explained that Alice soon may become a mother. He's not quite sure yet, but, to be on the safe side, he gave the zoo officials complete instructions for her prenatal care. If a serious emergency arises, Ferguson planned to ask Uncle Sam for leave to supervise the delivery.

Ferguson believed Alice was glad to leave the farm. He said she appeared to enjoy the truck ride from the farm to her new home.

Alice is 18, which is considered a giddy age for lady elephants, but Ferguson had little trouble teaching the giant animal to pull plows and harrows, after he purchased her from Beatty last spring.

Didn't Like Mules

"Alice didn't like it much at first," Ferguson said, "but she didn't like the mules around the place, either. Finally she got the idea she could show up the mules by hauling the plow around. After that she wanted to plow every day. Alice was devoted to Ferguson. She followed him around the farm like a dog. Once Alice saw Ferguson dive into a swimming pool on the plantation. When her master

ALICE IN HER NEW HOME—There'll be rest for the wearied farmer at Grant Park zoo this winter. Alice, a retired circus performer who more recently has been helping Matt Ferguson till a farm in Camden, S. C., was brought by the boss to the zoo here yesterday for safe keeping while he does a hitch in Uncle Sam's army. The kiddies liked the idea and were on hand to welcome Alice. did not come up to the surface of the water after nearly a minute, Alice became worried and trundled in after him. She dragged the bottom of the pool with her trunk until Ferguson came.

When Ferguson marches away to camp, he will carry one memento of Alice with him. In accordance with a Hindu superstition, Ferguson will carry one hair from the elephant's tail as a good-luck charm.

Until her master returns, Alice will do her bit with Coca to amuse the kiddies at Grant Park.

Dixie Recovers From Freezing Temperatures

Ice, Snow Create Traffic Hazards in New York State.

By The Associated Press.
Sub-freezing temperatures, ice-coated pavements and snow created traffic hazards in upper and central New York state yesterday while the south was recovering from record-breaking temperatures for this time of year. Jacksonville, Fla., with a low of 23 degrees, was one of the coldest spots in the country, although early surveys in fruit sections of that state indicated that a large portion of the crop escaped harm. Forecasters said the southern cold was moving off the mainland between Savannah, Ga., and Jacksonville, and that milder temperatures could be expected throughout the Gulf and southeastern states today. Other parts of the nation were mostly fair with moderate temperatures.

The heavy snowfall in upper New York led to the death of William J. Schroeder, 66, who collapsed while shovelling snow at Buffalo. A three-inch fall prevented airplanes from landing at the Buffalo airport. State police said traffic was reduced to a crawl in several up-state counties because of ice.

Some of the low readings Sunday included:

Atlanta 28, Savannah 32, Tallahassee 25, Miami 47, Tampa 36, Mobile 31, Montgomery 26, Little Rock 27, Nashville 32, Chattanooga 22, Birmingham 26, and Augusta, Ga., 33.

Buffalo, N. Y., reported 26, New York city 32, Boston 32, Philadelphia 30, Cleveland 28, Omaha 28, Denver 35, St. Louis 32, Indianapolis 25, Minneapolis 31.

Wreckage Believed Part Of Nazi's Invasion Fleet
FOLKSTONE, England, Nov. 17. (P)—Pieces of wreckage, believed possibly to be parts of the German invasion fleet reported shattered by continuous RAF raids, washed ashore along the southeast coast today after a fierce storm had swept the Strait of Dover.

In the wreckage was a wooden raft nearly 40 feet long with two air cylinders coupled underneath. A rubber raft of unusual design and pieces of timber 18 feet long were also found on the beach.

Nazi Reporters Wait Attacks on Gibraltar
BERN, Switzerland, Nov. 17.—A five-car caravan of German official photo and press experts was reported today to be already installed at La Linea, little Spanish town next to the British Rock of Gibraltar—presumably awaiting developments.

These were reported to be the same press specialists who filmed and reported the German drive through the Netherlands, Belgium and France. The personnel are regular members of the German army.

Farmers have found at least 15 uses for electric heating devices in the home and around the farm.

F. D. R. Opens '41 Campaign Against Polio

President Lauds Effort To Protect Health of U. S. Youth.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—(P)—President Roosevelt today opened the way for the country's 1941 drive against infantile paralysis and saluted as "one of the front lines of our national defense" the public effort to protect the health of this nation's youth.

Giving his "heartiest endorsement" to campaign plans already devised, the President wrote Keith Morgan, national chairman of the Committee for the Celebration of the President's Birthday, asking him to serve again.

The President also authorized use of his birthday, January 30, as the focal point for fund raising in the national "fight paralysis" campaign.

Morgan accepted reappointment and called upon "all America to enlist in our national defense for health."

Morgan said 12 states were swept with epidemics of the crippling disease this year and that 1940 would go down in records "as the fifth worst year in history."

Therefore, he continued, the national drive for funds through dances celebrating the President's birthday and through other campaigns would resolve into the "most far-reaching campaign program yet inaugurated."

Morgan named Eddie Cantor, comedian, to lead radio's "March of Dimes" drive; Grantland Rice, sports writer, to conduct campaigns in the field of sports; and Joseph M. Schenk, of the film industry, to continue as vice chairman.

Eight Persons Killed In Pennsylvania Crash

MIFFLINTOWN, Pa., Nov. 17.—(P)—Eight persons, including a young couple and their three small children, were killed last night in the crash of their automobile with a trailer truck on a curve near this central Pennsylvania community.

State Police Private R. E. Bailey said the car failed to make the turn and smashed head-on into the approaching truck.

Pope To Keep New Cardinals' Names Secret

Prelates To Acquire No Rights Until Publicly Proclaimed.

VATICAN CITY, Nov. 17.—(P)—A usually well-informed Vatican source said today there was a possibility Pope Pius XII would announce in the December consistory that he was reserving several new cardinals "in pectore" and that perhaps Archbishop Francis J. Spellman, of New York, was one of these.

Previous Popes have taken this action.

The Catholic Encyclopedia, speaking of "in pectore" or "in the breast," that is, secret appointments, says:

"It happens, at times, that the Pope, after creating some cardinals in consistory, adds that he has appointed one or more additional cardinals whom he reserves 'in pectore'—and whom he will make known later. Until they have been publicly announced, these cardinals acquire no rights, and if the Pope dies before having declared their names they do not become members of the Sacred College; but when he has proclaimed their elevation at a subsequent consistory, they take rank from the date of their first nomination and receive from that date all the emoluments accruing to their office."

ATLANTA, GA., NOVEMBER 18, 1940.

Spain Would Borrow

It is reported that Spain has asked the United States for a loan of $100,000,000. The money, it is explained, is to be used to feed the Spanish people who have been unable to rehabilitate their country after the long and cruel civil war.

Tragic stories are told of the lack of essential food items and it is stated that, despite strictest rationing, there is practically no supply whatever of many basic edibles. Yet, it is somewhat strange that, on the same day the appeal for the loan was made public, a dispatch from Madrid said that no longer was it advisable to ration meat, eggs and similar items, while the food situation in France was reported as greatly improved as imports from Africa approached the normal.

The United States will, of course, want to help Spain, or any other country in desperate straits for food, if it can do so without helping the armies of Hitler and Mussolini to crush Britain. Any request for food or for money from a nation which has given proof of its close friendship with the totalitarian powers, such as Spain, must be looked upon with suspicion.

For the British blockade is still an effective weapon of the war. Most people in this country do not wish, for instance, to send food to any nation under German control, because they know that, even if the specific food shipments sent were not confiscated by Germany, other food would be taken, with the United States gift merely substituting for it.

The same thing may be true of money, or credits, included in such a loan as Spain seeks. If that loan was used merely to aid Germany, either directly or indirectly, this government would be placed in the position of a gullible victim, if it granted the loan.

On the other hand, the humanitarian heart of America would never forgive itself should thousands of Spanish children die of starvation, who could have been saved by this small co-operation by the United States.

It is a puzzling and delicate situation, that calls for all the investigation and analysis possible by the American government before an intelligent decision can be made.

Listen, you archeologists, digging treasures of antiquity out of the Near Eastern sands, you'd better put them back until the "all clear" signal sounds.

Ah, Happy! Happy We!

A breathlessly panting America, so long poised on expectant tiptoe, so long suffering through the trivia which have recently crowded our pages, at last has been rewarded for its patience with a revelation of vital significance. Blasting through the news of elections, wars and famines, bursting upon us with refreshing suddenness, comes that great moment for which we have waited. At last, the mental giants who infest the New York night clubs have nominated their queen, 1940's Glamour Girl, that charming aristocrat of democracy whose face and figure will haunt our mad dreams during the dreary winter ahead.

Blond, petite, and oh, so innocently retiring, she is to be Miss Mary Lee Abbott, successor to that other paragon of kindly wisdom, Miss Brenda Frazier, whose profound contributions to the national intelligence once intrigued our fancy and inspired our delightful cogitations.

Out of that profound contribution to national thinking which emanates from nights at Monte Carlo, Twenty-One, the Stork, and the Crystal Room we may expect daily revelations, duly furnished the press by her shy press agent.

A nation must feel refreshed over this new election, trembling in vicarious thrills for the dear girl who is to lead us all to joy. Long may she revel!

Well away from the war and its destruction, the worst that can happen to us is being struck by a falling officeholder.

"Harvard discovers a strange animal, said to be distantly related to the cow." We had long speculated on the filet mignon in the 50-cent table d'hôte.

"North Americans are not masculine enough," complains Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, who begins to feel himself outnumbered by the growing quints.

Time To Think It Over

Eight young theological students in New York were this week sentenced to serve a year and a day, each, in prison for refusing to register for selective military service. Given a last opportunity by the court to reconsider, and comply with the law, all refused and, unless they change their minds quickly, will soon begin serving the sentences imposed.

It is difficult to understand the position taken by these young men. They are, it is to be presumed, too intelligent not to be able to understand the law and its provisions must have been explained to them, carefully.

It is not military service to which they are objecting, it is the mere registering, with all other young men of the nation, for selective draft and investigation of their suitability and availability for such service.

Ample provision is made in the law for the case of the genuinely sincere conscientious objector. Draft boards are directed to exempt from military service those who satisfy the board their objection is on truly conscientious, religious grounds. These eight, therefore, provided they had sincere grounds for their objection, were in no danger of entering military service.

The only conclusion which can be drawn from their behavior is that they are making a gesture, imagining themselves as martyrs and taking a false satisfaction out of the publicity their cases have attracted.

There will be no sympathy for them, however, from 99 per cent of the population. For all true Americans feel, deeply, that the man who is not willing to serve his country in time of need is not worthy of the freedom and opportunity his country provides for him.

The eight will, during the year and a day ahead of them, have plenty of time to think the matter over and it is to be hoped, as a result of that thinking, they will come out of prison better Americans than they are as they go in.

Even a Nazi spokesman concedes there must always be a Switzerland. Better minds agree that segregating yodelers is the only way.

Revealing.

A news dispatch from Berlin states that, beginning January 1, the meat of dogs will be legalized for human consumption. Already, the same story reveals, the meat of horses, foxes, wolves, badgers and other animals is being consumed by the people of Germany.

Nothing in the past has so forcefully revealed the effectiveness of the British blockade against Germany and German-held Europe, or the scarcity of food, all over Europe, that has come as a result of war. The withdrawal of millions of men from productive activity, into the army, and the ravages of war itself are having fearful effect.

When a shortage of food as serious as indicated by the resort to dog meat for human food exists in Germany proper, it may only be imagined what conditions are like in the conquered countries, from which the Nazis have already taken every possible pound of food for the benefit of the German population.

The question immediately arises as to how long the morale of the German population will hold up under such conditions, added to the terror of the nightly visitations by the bombers of the R. A. F. There have been, in recent months, numbers of rumors as to growing despair among the German people and, if these rumors be true, the added privations now revealed must inevitably hasten the day when an outraged populace rises against their brutal Nazi masters.

The people of besieged Paris, in 1870, ate the flesh of cats and sewer rats before they were forced to surrender. There have been cases in history of even worse extremities than this. But it is not likely that the German temperament will accept such horrors for long. Some day they will rise in revolt and the end of the Nazi nightmare will then be in sight.

"For the missiles encountered in modern war," says an expert, "the bulletproof vest is no protection." Not even if the heart is in the mouth?

NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN PASSES

When death came to former Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain of Great Britain, he "had become the symbol of all the mistakes of pre-war England," says the NEW YORK TIMES. While he was "unfortunate in peace and unfortunate in war" to the CHICAGO TRIBUNE, "the truth is that Mr. Chamberlain was better qualified to try for peace than he was to fight a war."

"To speak of Neville Chamberlain is to speak of an era," says the CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR, of Boston. "Had the world been what Mr. Chamberlain and so many others believed it was when he set out for Munich, how relatively easy would be the task we all must face." And the NEW ORLEANS TIMES-PICAYUNE declares, "Time may uncover new reasons, new defenses for the course pursued by Chamberlain."

"The British press hails him as a martyr." He was the victim of war as certainly as if he had been killed by a bomb. Instead of expiring on a sick bed," says the DENVER POST, while the LOS ANGELES TIMES believes "the poor opinion formed of him after Munich was second guessing. No one, Mr. Chamberlain's bitter critics included, could possibly have foreseen the full extent of the Nazi leader's bad faith."

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

OUTRAGE TO THE LAWS OF CHANCE WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Three explosions, each in a powder plant, all occurring within an hour, outrage the law of probabilities, especially when powder is known to be one of the worst defense bottlenecks. Although only one of the plants attacked has received actual defense orders, investigation of the explosions is proceeding in an atmosphere of strong suspicion of sabotage. Meanwhile, rather naturally, official attention has also been focused on the broader problem of the Axis espionage activities from which sabotage may result.

FLUSHING THE COVEYS Three obstacles must be surmounted before the espionage problem can be adequately solved. The first, oddly enough, is the Dies committee investigating un-American activities, which is currently driving the Justice Department almost mad.

Even the least friendly Justice Department officials sensibly admit that for all its faults, the Dies committee has performed many useful functions. They are particularly grateful to it for educating the public in the need for fighting any effort to organize a Fifth Column in the United States. But they feel that enough is enough. They compare the committee's present doings to the behavior of an all-trained, overzealous bird dog, which flushes the coveys before its master comes near enough to get a shot at the quarry.

For example, the Dies committee staff recently conducted a raid on the German Library of Information, seizing the library's files. With considerable fanfare, they extracted from the files evidence to prove that the library was a Nazi propaganda agency. Although everyone not completely witless had been aware of this already, the keenness of the Dies committee was then unkindly compared to the supposed laxity of the Justice Department. Yet the Department, long before the raid occurred, had put its own agents into the library. Information was constantly being received from them of a much more confidential and important nature than was ever confined to the library files. And this source of information was of course completely cut off by the Dies committee raid.

The example suggests what should be sufficiently obvious, that the first principle of counter-espionage is never to spring a trap until all the vermin have been caught. The Justice Department is quite as alive as the Dies committee to the danger of espionage and propaganda work supervised by German and Italian consuls and other agents in this country. The Department has its traps laid. And it is being driven almost mad for the simple reason that all its traps are in continuous danger of being prematurely sprung by a loudly publicized raid by Representative Martin Dies or one of his henchmen.

HUGE FBI JOB The Dies obstacle must be got round at the next session of congress, when the committee will request a renewed appropriation. So, too, must the second obstacle, the inadequacy of the Justice Department staff.

At the last session, the number of agents allowed the Federal Bureau of Investigation was raised to 1,500. Great efforts have been made to hire the additional agents as rapidly as possible, but although they have been taken on at the rate of 40 a week, and most of them have been assigned to counter-espionage work, the counter-espionage division of the FBI is still too small. How much too small, it is easy to understand, when it is remembered that besides general counter-espionage work, the division is also responsible for the prevention of sabotage/in something like 12,000 plants which are now producing or will soon begin to produce defense material.

The bureau has coped with the situation as best it could, sending agents to each of the more important plants to inspect the lay-out. Particular attention has been paid to hiring policies, systems of identification of persons admitted to the factories, facilities within the factories that might conceivably be useful to saboteurs, and protection against illegal entry. In order at least to lay the groundwork in smaller and less important plants, the bureau has also prepared a booklet on methods of avoiding sabotage, and has invited manufacturers to come in with their problems. Disagreeable as it is, however, to think of a huge federal police network, it is obviously necessary to increase the FBI staff still further. For what is being done at present merely scratches the surface.

NO SPY SCARES Finally, there is the third and least important obstacle, the danger of foolish and oppressive spy scares. Fortunately, Attorney General Robert H. Jackson is probably more afraid of spy scares than any man in the government. He is in the habit of saying that he is "afraid to wake up in the morning, for fear something will have happened to start a spy hunt." As this is his attitude, the public should feel safe to let him deal with the espionage problem as firmly as he thinks necessary.

Unwitting Samaritan

My friend, the service station proprietor, was a busy man last week, what with all the demands for anti-freeze, battery check-ups and general winter air overhauling. He and his staff worked some 16 or 17 hours daily for a few days.

One job went like this: His acquaintance rushed in one evening.

"Dick," he explained, hurriedly, "my car is parked at such-and-such a place, with a flat tire. Maybe all it needs is air. I've got to attend lodge meeting. Here are the keys. Have one of your boys fix the tire and bring the car up here, will you. I'll get it after meeting."

So the boy found a tire with a hole in it, on the car. Took off the tire and fixed it, even put in a "shoe" to strengthen the casing. Then tried to start the car, and it wouldn't. Key didn't fit. Went to the lodge meeting place, called the owner out and told him he'd given the wrong keys.

"Like heck I did," the owner explained. "You've fixed the wrong car!"

So, someone unknown, got a tire fix job for nothing. That is, unless his conscience makes him pay the bill. Because the filling station man left a bill in the car, just to let him know who'd played the Good Samaritan with his tire.

Not Unusual

Mistakes of car identity are not uncommon.

One afternoon I took the wife to get her week's supply of groceries. Parked the car and while she went to the market I went to attend to another little business. Told her wait for me in the car, if she finished first.

She did. Had the grocery boy carry two big bags of food supplies out to the car and sat patiently until a strange man appeared and wanted to know what she was doing in his car. She was indignant for a moment or two until she discovered me, sitting in our car, three parking spaces away.

And there was the friend, also on business in the neighborhood grocery center, who discovered about $5 worth of groceries in the rear of her car, after she got home. Groceries she hadn't bought.

She immediately drove back to the store and found the woman who had put the groceries in the wrong car. Said woman was frantic with worry and almost accused my friend of trying to steal her property.

And there is the other case of a well-known Atlanta man who found a flat tire on his car one evening. Phoned for the repair man and stood and watched while the tire was taken off, repaired and put back on again.

Then his key wouldn't unlock the car door. And it was only after the work was all done and paid for he discovered his own car, tires all in good shape, two parking spaces up the street.

Forgetful Parkers

Another friend of mine grew accustomed to having to park his car some four or five blocks away from the lodge room where he regularly attended the weekly meetings of the brethren.

So, one evening, he spent a long time looking for the car, after the meeting, and walked back toward the lodge room to reach a telephone and tell the police his bus had been stolen.

It was just as he reached the entrance to the lodge room he recognized his own car right in front, and remembered he had been lucky enough to find parking space there, that night.

And I recall the day when I parked my own car on Spring street and, business in that neighborhood concluded, spent 30 minutes looking for it, all up and down Ivy street.

No, there wasn't a ticket for too-long parking on the windshield when I finally remembered where it was and reclaimed it.

Maybe Absentminded

Maybe we're absentminded, my friends and I. But I'll bet most everyone has had similar experiences.

I'm waiting for the day when I arrive home and discover a strange wife in the back seat.

Then, I bet there'll be trouble!

Obscure Criminals

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Some of my loving friends among the professional labor skates are fond of saying that disclosures concerning a few dirty criminals of their illustrious and altruistic company have been overexploited and that, after all, one must expect to find a few crooks in any large body of human beings. But I have observed that when a comparatively obscure journeyman criminal is turned up by way of proving my old contention that the official list of the AFL contains the nucleus of a first-class rogues' gallery, the big labor leaders immediately reply that this is petty stuff and not worth mentioning. Yet we have to remember that it is the common gorilla in the local union who deals directly with the little people of the rank and file, and it is of such a crook and his dealings with the little people that I write today.

Our subject is a stickup man and racketeer named Michael Lomars, the business manager of Confectionery and Tobacco Workers' Employees Local 1175 of the Retail Clerks' International Protective Association, of the AFL. This international is also the parent union of the Retail Food and Grocery Clerks' Local 1204, whose business manager, Nick Ella, was convicted here in April of this year of extorting money from the proprietors of retail stores and markets and sentenced to a term of 15 to 30 years.

Lomars got into the union racket about 1933 when Bloff, Sealise, Circella and the Nattipans, a criminal sum of Chicago and Miami decided that it was a safe and lucrative substitute for bootlegging and kidnaping.

To Find A Victim Lomars and some other crooks got together in a hotel room in New York on the night of July 1, 1937, and sent out two of their number—a man and a woman named Dorothy Stirrat, alias Dolly Turner, also known as the Lady Finger—to scare up a victim in the night clubs.

Dolly and the other gorilla went to the Plaza hotel where they spotted Mrs. James V. Forrestal, whose husband is now an assistant secretary of the navy. They phoned Lomars, and he and two others piled into a stolen car and drove to the Plaza, where Dolly and her friend fingered the Forrestal car as it drove away. Lomars and the boys followed to the Forrestal home, where Dolly's friend—who shall be nameless because he hasn't yet been caught—Reuben Klansky, robbed Mrs. Forrestal of jewelry worth more than $50,000.

Klansky testified for the people in the trial of Lomars, which was presided over by Herman Stroman of Thomas E. Dewey's staff, and on October 30 of this year he was convicted of armed robbery along with Joseph Weiss, the one who accompanied him in the stolen car. The Lady Finger also was convicted of robbery, but because she was married, her offense was less serious. Weiss has a record and so faces a minimum of from 3 to 60 years, but Lomars has no previous convictions, so the least he can get is from 10 to 30 years. Klansky has not been tried as yet.

Members

Lomars is now in the Tombs awaiting sentence, and, out of sympathy for their devoted of the members of Local 1175 showed up at a meeting in a hotel Wednesday night to hear a very moving plea, by a brother introduced as Albert Greenberg, business agent, for money to finance Brother Lomars' appeal. The speaker said the executive board—composed of course of nature's noblemen—had decided that a day's pay from all hands would not be too great a sacrifice for the lofty purpose of getting Brother Lomars out of "that miserable jail."

However, he had since consulted counsel and counsel had advised him that such an assessment would be unconstitutional. So the brother identified as Greenberg had taken it on himself to amend the recommendations of the executive board, and he now proposed that the members be permitted to give "voluntary" contributions of from $2 to $5 out of their little pay for long hours at uncertain and arduous employment to be collected by a committee of devoted friends of Brother Lomars.

Brainwaves Wanted.

The Defense Force Liaison Committee of Johannesburg, South Africa, is asking for ideas under the caption, "Brainwaves Wanted." Although it can take advantage of inventive genius all over the world and the knowledge and experience of the best military scientists, it has been impressed by the recent bright idea of a man who had no military training and knew nothing of mechanics. This man, a farmer, was observing armed forces maneuvering in the fields. His native ingenuity and common sense told him at once that if a certain piece of equipment was built the effectiveness of the troops would be increased. The committee adopted his suggestion and is convinced that it will do much to help win the war.

Ten went up from Poona, 1,000 miles north of the equator, and 16 from Agra, farther north. Of these 22 were sent up between November and April when the sun was below the horizon and solar radiation did not influence the thermometers.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

A FEW MEMORIES LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 17.—Coming up on the plane yesterday some old memories kept crowding in. My first plane ride of any length was in 1931 when I flew from Atlanta to Cincinnati on the way to the late W. L. Stripling's training camp. It was over the same route and I recall how Louisville's airport looked in the dusk as we took off for Cincinnati.

We flew then in tri-motored Fords. They were good, stout planes and many of them still are in use in South America flying freight. Plane design was new. They were noisy and there was some vibration in what was the very best transport plane of its time.

At Nashville there was a change of planes. I had been writing with the portable typewriter on my knees and at Nashville I left the typewriter on the seat. The porters missed the top and at Cincinnati that night I had to carry that open typewriter. The carriage would slide the worst time. At Cleveland the Stripling met me and we drove the 25 miles out to that oddest of all fight camps.

Well, the fields have come along with the planes. We didn't have two-way radio in 1931 and the fields were largely fields. Candler field has done its real growing in the past nine years. It is amazing to see what has happened. When I recall the stout plane of 1929 and compare it with the quiet, sleek and powerful machines of today—the world moves along. And nothing has come as fast as aviation.

The fields were small in those days and there were few runways. The modern plane couldn't get in and out of the fields we were using just nine short years ago.

THE STRIBLINGS That fight camp was an odd one. It was at Geauga Lake, an amusement park. There was a horse track a half-mile down the road. I remember the tout who gave me a winner which paid off $18 for $2 and then touted me on another which ran last. It was an awful track.

The camp was pitched in this park. There was a roller-coaster, which was magnificent in its deep swoops. There were shooting galleries, hot-dog stands, fortune tellers and all the usual garish displays of an amusement park.

There were summer cottages all about the park. In some of them lived jockeys. The press cottage was next door to one of the jockey cottages. Every evening they and their lady friends would have a beer party and play a tiny portable gramophone. The next morning many of the poor devils would be out on the road, running in the hot June sun, to take off weight.

It was in the days of prohibition but Cleveland and its environs never went dry any more than did the other cities, large and small. Beer was especially plentiful. Canadian beer came across the lake and breweries in Cleveland made it. Some of the cottages were beer joints. One afternoon some of the newspapermen went to one of them for refreshment and found the beer vendor's daughter getting married. It was a swell wedding. The bride had on a heavy white satin dress. She was a plump little Italian girl. When the wedding was done she bustled about, waiting on the beer trade, still wearing her white satin dress. She could carry three steins in each hand. We helped eat the wedding dinner. There was baked chicken, much spaghetti and ravioli and it was an altogether fine affair.

W. L. Stripling, as fine a boy as the fight game ever knew, reached a peak three days before the fight and went into the ring drawn and off in weight. It went almost 15 rounds. He was badly beaten up about the face but he took it like a man. For about 10 rounds he was ahead on points. Then he began to fade. W. L. is gone. Joe Jacobs, who managed Schmeling, is gone. And Schmeling himself is in Nazi Germany.

THE BIG DRAMA It was an odd fight camp in more ways than one. Stripling was a restless man. He liked speed. He was an excellent pilot and competed in air races. He had the fastest automobile he could buy and the fastest speed boat. But he liked best of all a big powerful motorcycle. On this he could feel himself closest to speed.

He went flying in a blimp one afternoon and the promoters were happy but worried.

And then, not long before the fight, he pulled an act which must remain as the most bizarre of all those which the heavyweight boxing game has supplied.

I was at Schmeling's camp, 90 miles away in Pennsylvania, one afternoon. Schmeling was sparring. An airplane appeared in the sky and began to stunt. At last it climbed high and then dived on the camp. It came so low that spectators dived off their seats and fell on the ground. They scrambled up, angry and amazed. The plane dived again. Apparently was going to hit the camp but it leveled off. The motor was cut and a face leaned out and yelled, "Hey there, Maxie."

It was Stripling. He had borrowed the plane and put on his little act just to work off some of the restless energy which drove him always.

Schmeling's camp was much more satisfactory. Or was until a few days before the fight when an undertaker's convention appeared. There were open coffins in the lobby. There were displays of wreaths and fluids and it was a rather grim sight.

One night the friends of a reporter who had gone heavily to sleep, placed a rubber wreath, which they had purloined, on the stomach of the sleeping friend. He was very angry when he awoke because also about his neck were some artificial flowers. It was just a coincidence that he died a month later after an appendectomy.

There Would Be No Great Industries If All Men Were Satisfied With a Million Dollars

By ROBERT QUILLEN

The radio and the public prints urge you to make an end of your troubles by using this or that pill, and some millions of our adult population are more or less regular pill-takers.

If you are one of them, you have noticed the workings of a curious law. The pill you were first persuaded to use seemed for a time to be magic. But its effectiveness slowly decreased and the magic waned and disappeared, and you went searching for a better pill.

Your doctor probably explained it. As nature adjusts your nervous system to a hot or a cold climate, so she adjusts it to the irritant of the pill and thus chemicates and balances a meddling influence that violates the natural order of things.

For reasons undoubtedly wise and beneficent, everything that comes into our lives loses its power to affect us after we get used to it.

The cynic will agree and make a sour joke of the fact that honeymoons are soon ended. Man courts a woman as though his hope of Heaven depended upon winning her; then, having persuaded her to say yes, he promptly begins to lose interest.

But what he actually loses is an abnormal state of mind. It takes more power to start a vehicle than to keep it rolling. Enthusiasms are necessary to overcome inertia, but all great emotions are abnormal and quickly burn themselves out. The ecstasy of courtship ends for the simple reason that it no longer is necessary. Nature says, in effect: "The fever is gone; come down to earth and get to work." And she probably figures that people congenial enough to fall in love will be congenial enough to become good friends when reason returns.

In other matters, the wisdom of nature's plan is more clearly apparent. Man needs the driving power of enthusiasm while he is struggling to reach a certain goal; but, if his zeal did not wane, after his arrival, he would be content with his achievement and would climb no higher.

Sublime discontent is the real mother of invention and discovery and progress and all betterment. When a man is satisfied, he stops growing.

Nature tricks us into doing what is best for the race, by making every natural duty a pleasure; but, when pleasure would tempt us to stop climbing, she makes it a bitterness and a bore.

ARE WE TOO LIBERAL TO VETERANS AND WIDOWS?

Editor Constitution: Will we never get through giving preference and special privileges to the veterans and widows of veterans of the World War? I noticed in the Sunday paper where the State Labor Department, set up under the merit system, would give additions of 10 per cent to disabled veterans, 5 per cent to veterans who were not disabled and 10 per cent to widows of veterans on examinations under this department.

It is not enough that these preferences are given by the United States government without the state taking such steps?

When the Armistice was signed the total armed forces of the United States was 4,000,000 men—total number who went overseas 2,086,000—total number who were actually in combat 1,933,000, leaving a total number of 2,000,000 who didn't get any closer to the Germans than you or I. Why for the rest of our lives do we have to bow down and honor these men and their widows and possibly in later years their sons and daughters and grandsons and granddaughters who did no more for their country than they should have?

In the present war the London civilians are praised above the army and the men at the front say they could not get along without them. The high morale of the people helps the soldier in many ways. What of our civilian population during the last war? Didn't our people give themselves energetically to the prosecution of enterprises which were needed to support the soldiers? At the time of the Armistice there was in the jurisdiction of the Shipping Board of the United States 2,185 seagoing vessels totaling over 9,500,000 tons. Eighteen months before that date the country had only 2,750,000 tons of shipping.

In the United States government hospitals over the country the veterans can get free medical attention. I would venture to say that only 25 per cent of the patients now in the hospitals throughout the country saw actual combat service, but they are being treated for appendicitis, tonsillitis, cases of pneumonia, etc., while the taxpayers of the country pay for it.

What about the boys who are going to give up jobs and make as much of a sacrifice in the present draft as the 2,000,000 men in 1918 made who saw no actual service in France? Will they be given special privileges and preferences? They should, if all is right and fair, and if this goes on and on, where will we end up? As I see it, those who actually saw service in France and were wounded or have since suffered mentally or physically as a result of their service should certainly be taken care of. The men who were killed, their wives and children, should receive compensation—but, to the rest of them we would say, "Son, you served your country well" and let that be the end of it.

Discovers Passing Of Trolley Car—And Reminisces.

News item of last week reported that Miami had run its last street car—with appropriate celebration. Jacksonville had dropped them two years ago.

That seems to be the trend. To get rid of the tracks. It is even evident in Atlanta, which long has operated one of the best trolley systems in the United States. I'm speaking without authority but I think maybe the reason our company has stuck to trolley electricity is because it has plenty of "juice," produced by the waters of north Georgia—with oodles of capital tied up in the plants.

On the other hand, the company has had enough juice from hydroelectric plants to meet all its demand—hence its several big steam plants which consume coal or natural gas.

It has operated gasoline buses for years, to replace or supplement part of its "track" service. Only recently it replaced the Oglethorpe and Buckhead lines with "trackless trolleys," which run on rubber tires and are flexible enough to pull in close to the curbs and dodge around traffic. They're faster, too.

Time brings changes. Usually improvements. I can dimly remember horse cars. And the first electric trolley I saw as a child—down in New Orleans. And many of us can recall the "open" trolleys used in summer, with seats running crosswise and the conductor collecting fares by climbing along the long running board. With "Smoking in the Three Last Seats." They could carry a lot of folks to the baseball game.

Heroes of the Past.

I can remember from my Nashville days—when the motorman stood out in front on an open platform and took the rain and the wind and the cold—because experts agreed that boxing him in behind glass would reduce his efficiency and form a hazard to the traveling public. Coming in from Glendale park he'd have to break ice off his flowing mustache.

The motorman—or the chauffeur—rides in comfort now. And so do the passengers. Private cars and taxicabs have heaters, even away down here in the sunny south with its balmy breezes.

Maybe we're growing soft. Maybe we "can't take it." But why should we "take it"? Is there any practical heroism in submitting to be half-frozen when one might as well be comfortable? I've spent autumn evenings in the "shacks" of friends who had been on the river banked by the mountain side. Delightful in summer. But in late fall? Well, now!

There is beauty in the dancing flame of an open wood fire. Pictures in the coals! Romance! You can pop corn, if you like popcorn. Or roast marshmallows, if you have a yearning for marshmallows.

Meanwhile you'll scorch your face and your backbone will freeze. There'll be 12 guests and not more than four can get close enough to the fire to know it's there.

I love an open fire with its cheery glow—if it is backed up by a good steam or hot air system from the furnace down cellar. As my old Persian pal, Mr. Khayyam, might have remarked, I'll "take the warmth and let the romance go."

Just a New Version.

Good Morning—By Louie D. Newton

Miss Vivian Perkerson, secretary-treasurer of the city of Manchester, writes:

"I read your column in Thursday's Constitution about packing down leaves in a layer cake, and since we have loads of leaves to haul off the streets of Manchester, I would like to have the formula for properly rotting them."

Mrs. J. C. Lanier, of West Point, writes:

"Please give us the recipe for that layer cake of leaves, acid, etc."

I start with a layer of leaves, say a foot deep. They should be packed as far as possible and sprinkled. Then put on a coat of 16 per cent acid. The moisture in the leaves will help to assimilate the acid. Then put on a layer of stable manure, and if you have it, a good sprinkling of lime with the stable manure. Then start the whole procedure again with the leaves, water, acid, manure and lime.

I use a ceiling wall for the pen. Otherwise you will lose a good deal of the mixture seeping through the walls. And when you get all your leaves in this layer cake, be certain to put on a thick layer of manure or woods soil on top—icing, if you please. This will insure more rapid rotting of the leaves by holding the moisture. The winter rains will likely provide enough additional moisture, but if there should be an extended drouth during the winter, it will help to soak the pen every week.

I am glad to have these inquiries about my layer cake idea. Every time I pass a home and see them burning leaves, I am tempted to stop and ask why they are depriving themselves of the finest possible fertilizer. You have only to go into the woods and swamps to see what nature does with the leaves. The reason people pay good money for woods soil is to get the very elements of plant food that Nature stores up from the leaves.

Ask any chemist to tell you about the phosphates represented in rotted leaves, mixed with stable manure, and he will likely tell you that you have there just about the best diet you can provide for your flowers and vegetables. Any com-present" is a tradition of society news.

It has been seized upon by hundreds of newspaper writers as a fine subject for burlesque. I've read a score, or twice that, of fake descriptions of weddings giving the man's point of view. Most of them good—and often cruel.

Best line I remember was printed as the sotto-voce comment of a bridegroom's best pal when said trembling husband-to-be announced: "With all my worldly goods I thee endow."

"Gosh," whispered his pal, "she's got his bicycle."

But I've run across a new version of the burlesque—or sardonic—wedding story. It is quoted from an Iowa paper by Leodel-Coleman's Bulloch Herald, of Statesboro. And I'll clip it and paste it up:

"Clarence (Tubby) Rogers, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Rogers, of Osseo, became the husband of Miss Margaret Gilbertson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Gilbertson, of Augusta, in a beautiful ring ceremony Saturday noon before a justice of the peace at Waukon, Iowa."

"Blushing prettily, he replied to the questions of the justice in low but firm tones, never indicating that he noted the omission of the 'obey' in the bride's answers."

"He was attractively attired in a three-piece suit of black pin-stripe woolen material, consisting of coat, vest and pants. The coat was charmingly festooned, with a white flower in the left button-hole."

"The vest was sleeveless, closed in the front and gracefully fashioned with pockets. It was held together at the back with a strap and buckle."

"His pants were neatly pressed for the occasion and he wore them with an air as if he little suspected it would be the last time he wore the pants' in that family, as the familiar expression goes."

"Hose and necktie added just the right dash of color to complement the effect. Shoes were of genuine leather, laced with strings of the same color, giving a chic effect."

Absent Solons May Be Block To Adjourning

Democrats Confident of Vote If Members Return.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(AP)—Congress is scheduled to vote this week on the question of ending the 1940 session, but whether the answer will be in the affirmative appears to depend upon how many Democrats respond to a call from their leaders to come back to Washington.

These leaders have expressed confidence that they have the votes, if they can get them here, to overcome almost solid Republican opposition to adjournment. Representative McCormack, Democrat, Massachusetts, the majority leader, announced that he expected to offer an adjournment resolution Tuesday.

Both houses will meet tomorrow for their first business session in five weeks. During that period preceding and following the election they have been operating under an agreement to consider no legislation.

Enough Democrats joined with the Republicans to defeat a pre-election attempt to adjourn.

Oil wells are drilled about five times as fast now as 10 years ago, the result of improved equipment and techniques.

Georgia Homes Really USE Their Electric Service

Georgia families are not indifferent to an abundant, dependable supply of low-cost electric service.

During the twelve months period just reported on, homes on the lines of the Georgia Power Company used an average of 1,505 kilowatt hours of electric energy. The average throughout the nation for the same period was 934 kilowatt hours per home.

That means that homes on the lines of this Company used 60 per cent MORE electric service, as an average per home, than the average home throughout the rest of the whole United States!

One of the reasons is probably this:

While the homes in all the 48 states, taken together, were paying an average of 3.89 cents per kilowatt hour for their electric service, homes on this Company's lines were paying an average of only 2.75 cents per kilowatt hour.

These Georgia homes get their service for almost 30 per cent LESS than the national average!

Walker Roofing Company Celebrating Its 33d Anniversary

Applied Roofs From Texas To the Atlantic

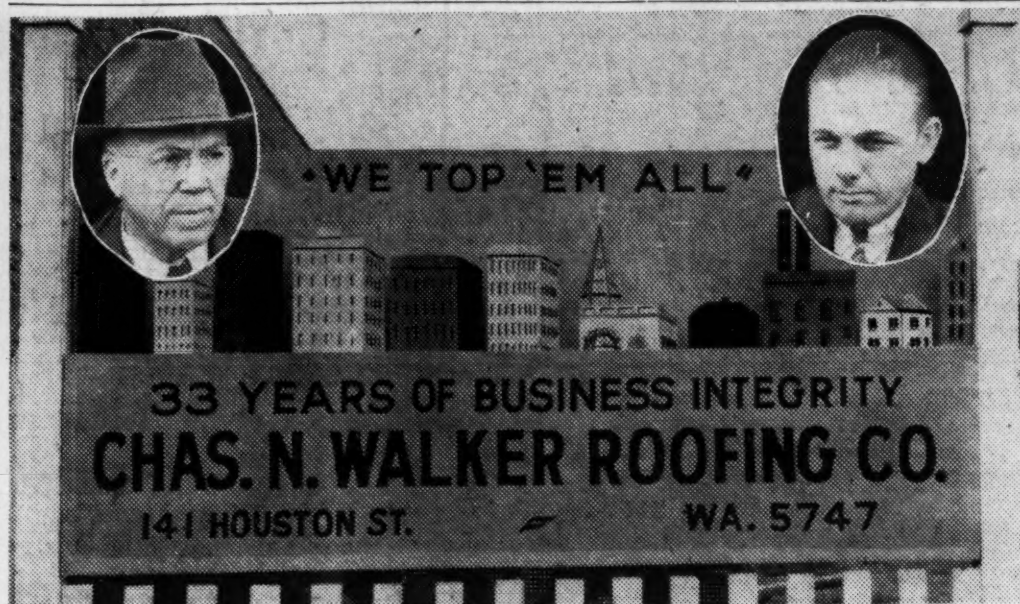

One of Oldest Roofing Concerns in Entire Country.

By PRESS HUDDLESTON.
"Like father like son" is an axiom in the lives and work of Charles N. Walker Sr. and Charles N. Walker Jr.

Both are wedded to their long-experienced work of applying roofs to buildings of all kinds; both are interested in every good movement for the city, which constitutes good citizenship; both have been for many years—and still are—strong workers in the Boy Scout movement, and both are active in religious and fraternal work.

However, this review is largely intended to tell Constitution readers of the long and successful career of the Walkers in the roofing business. The Charles N. Walker Roofing Company is just now celebrating and enjoying its 33d continuous year in this line of work. The senior started the business in a modest way, and in the course of time—some dozen years or more ago—the junior came along and joined the father, and is now an important link in the Walker roofing chain.

The business has never changed hands—never changed its name—but has grown steadily along under its original formation and management. It has remained an Atlanta-owned and managed institution. Its growth has been a tribute to the dependability and satisfactory service rendered to thousands of patrons in its 33 years of operation. Its promises and guarantees have always been relied upon and fulfilled, because a reputable, growing concern knew no other way in which to succeed.

The Walker Roofing Company is located at 141-43 Houston street, where it has well equipped offices and warehouses, with ample roofing supplies, and from which it sends out its corps of expert roofing men to fulfill its contracts—always, however, supervised by Mr. Walker.

The company features, among various other materials, Kopper's bonded felt and coal tar pitch for gravel roofs, also Amalgamated asphalt felt and asphalt shingles. Not even an approximate amount of the new and repaired roofs handled by the company in its 33 years can be suggested here, but Walker's roofs can be seen from Texas to the Atlantic.

If you have a home or property on which repairs to the roof are needed, or if you are building a residence or business property, remember that the Charles N. Walker Roofing Company "Tops 'Em All." Give the company a ring, get an estimate—this will be gladly done, and it may really be worth your time, and remember, that roofs can be installed on payments of from one to three years—FHA plan.

The head of this company is one of Atlanta's live-wire citizens—always interested in good civic movements and a leader in fraternal work. For 19 years he was prominent as a leader in the Boy Scout movement, and has continued his active interest in this work. His business, social and financial standing in the city and section is one of the best guarantees of his dependability in his roofing work.

His son—the only addition to the Walker family—has grown much interested in the roofing business. A few more years and he may be able to advise the long-experienced father in roof technique. In fact, that is an ambition of the junior. He is a graduate of Tech school, and following the bent of his father has been interested in scout work for 14 years.

They make a good team—this father and son—and they've always had a good wife and mother, giving encouragement to their business, and a good roof over their heads—and that's what they'd like to put over your head, if you need one.

Brooks-Pruitt Announces New Tire Connections

After an extensive search of the market in an effort to secure the most economical, plus all possible safety, Brooks-Pruitt, operating tire engineers, has decided upon Norwalk tires, made in Norwalk, Conn., which has unusual features, inasmuch as all passenger car tires are built with five-ply bead-to-bead, assuring an extra safety without any discomfort in riding. Norwalk tires are built with Bibb heat resisting cord, made in Macon, Ga. This exclusive cord, made only by Bibb Manufacturing Company, reduces heat within the tire, thereby eliminating blow-outs and separations.

This firm has also added to their line the Pennsylvania tire, which has been well known to Atlanta motorists for the last 30 years. The Pennsylvania tire has unusual features, covering a wide range of all sizes, in both passenger car and commercial operations.

Paul L. Pruitt, secretary and treasurer of this new firm of tire engineers, who has a great many years of experience in all classes of accounts, states that it is his belief that these two lines of tires, Norwalk and Pennsylvania combined, cover a wider range of tire services than any one company can offer. Mr. Pruitt states that these tires have been thoroughly tested in Atlanta by various operations and in all tests have proven favorable beyond reasonable expectations and in many instances have shown mileage so phenomenal that some of the records are unbelievable. He points out that tires constructed with Bibb H-R cord have been recapped as high as five times in their modern recapping plant. This shows a saving to the motorist of almost 80 per cent in his new tire purchases, which in these days of mounting cost on automobile operations is the only saving being offered to the motorist, as gas, oil, repairs and all other items that the motorist has to buy have been steadily increasing in price.

Well-Liked Weiner Brand Is Superior

Popular Product Made by Atlanta Sausage Company.

When a man has devoted 20 or more years of his life to the manufacture of food products, he ought to know how to make them good—how to mix the ingredients to make them wholesome and palatable.

Have you noticed those qualities in Superior brand of weiners and pork sausage? Many have, and many will serve no other kind of such products than Superior brand, manufactured by the Atlanta Sausage Company, 914 Howell Mill road.

For many years F. H. Heindol, owner and manager and director of the creation of products, has been engaged in this one line of furnishing tables, and barbecue stands and markets and picnics with good eats.

Superior brand of weiners is well and favorably known to many, many scores of people, who enjoy this tasty food. In barbecue places, in weiner stands and markets all over the city one will find Superior weiners, made of pork, veal and beef, and made usually by the sterilized spices Mr. Heindol uses in them. Another thing that makes them popular is the manner and method used by the company to tenderize the casings. When you bite into a Superior weiner note the tender, snappy, crisp manner in which it melts in your mouth. There is none of that withery, tough casing—nothing but a tender, juicy morsel to please your appetite.

The company is also makers of a complete and tasty line of sausage—Superior sausage—just as popular in the markets, and called by hundreds of customers, as are the weiners.

The company does a large wholesale business with its line of Superior weiners and sausage, and its patrons are constantly on the increase because of the care and thought given in their manufacture. Deliveries are made all over the city and environs, and markets that want to be supplied with the type of products which please their patrons would do well to phone HE. 7317 for a supply of Superior brand products.

firm, has just returned from an extensive trip in the east, and has brought back and installed in the already modern recapping shop, the latest devices for inspection and the renewing of treads on worn, slick tires. The motto of this modern shop has been and continues to be, that "when better methods of treading are devised, they will be found in the Tire Engineers' Shop, 141 Ivy street, N. E."

Harry Brooks and Paul Pruitt, members of this firm, invite their many friends to inspect their new and enlarged facilities at 141 Ivy street, N. E.

Termite Harm Is Frequently Exaggerated

Statements Sometimes Made To Alarm Property Owner.

Statements of the rate and extent of termite damage, often made to alarm the property owner, are frequently grossly exaggerated. Termites rarely have been known to completely ruin a building. Such a condition would usually require many years to develop.

Nevertheless, this property destroyer should not be disregarded or underrated. The annual damage to structures in this country amounts to about $50,000,000. In many parts of Georgia termite infestation is found in as high as four out of five buildings.

While the danger of complete destruction is remote, termites do seriously impair the strength of vital timbers, leading to expensive repairs and greatly increased depreciation. Relentlessly, working day and night, winter and summer, these small insects, silently and unseen, steadily chew away sills, joists, flooring and other wood members of a building. They may even consume contents of the house in their search for food.

The condition shown in the picture above right was discovered after the owner found that termites were eating books in their shelves, after coming up through the floor below. After proper repairs the building has now been protected from further damage by Terminix insulation.

The chemical "Terminix" and the method of treating, having the same name, were developed by E. L. Bruce Company, world's largest makers of hardwood flooring. The Terminix organization consists of 57 licensees, of which Bruce Terminix Company, with its main office at 596 Peachtree street, Atlanta, is the local unit. With 12 years of consolidated experience of the entire organization

HIDDEN TERMITE DAMAGE under an Atlanta home. General infestation and extensive damage (note shelter tubes) was revealed by Terminix inspector, although externally the building appeared to be in sound condition.

tion as a background, Bruce Terminix Company affords the most modern methods of termite control, responsibility guaranteed. Performance of Terminix contracts is guaranteed by E. L. Bruce Company and Sun Insurance office, giving Terminix contract holders effective and fully dependable assurance of termite protection. Bruce Terminix Company will gladly furnish literature, information and skilled inspections upon request to their main office or either of their branch offices located in Macon, Albany or Columbus.

Wage-Hour, Union Contract Relation Given

Under Certain Conditions Work Week May Exceed 40 Hours.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(AP) The wage-hour administration said today that an employer's obligation to pay time and one-half for work in excess of 40 hours a week was not voided by existence of a union contract calling for a longer work week, unless the contract also made other stipulations.

The agreement, the agency said, must provide for an "absolute maximum of 1,000 hours" work in any 26-week period or 2,000 hours' work in 52 weeks, "must be the result of collective bargaining by representatives certified by the Labor Relations Board, and must provide for a fixed annual wage or continuous employment for either 52 weeks or 2,000 hours. Where such an agreement exists employees may work up to 12 hours a day and 56 hours a week without payment at overtime rates."

U. D. C. Meeting To Open Today In Montgomery

Highlight of Convention Will Be Unveiling of Davis Statue.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 17. (UP)—Early arrivals of the 1,000 delegates expected for the 47th annual United Daughters of the Confederacy convention attended tonight's services at St. John's Episcopal church, where Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy, and his family worshipped in the early days of the War Between the States.

Before the services, the delegates to the convention, which opens tomorrow and will end Friday, were entertained at a reception given by Governor and Mrs. Frank Dixon in the Alabama executive mansion. Mrs. Charles E. Bolling, U. D. C. president general from Richmond, Va., tonight was guest of honor at an executive reception. Highlight of the convention will be the unveiling Tuesday afternoon of a $20,000 Davis statue on the Alabama capitol grounds. The statue was the subject of heated controversy last winter when the Alabama chapter of the U. D. C. protested a model submitted by Frederick C. Hibbard, Chicago sculptor, was not true to Davis. The controversy was arbitrated by the Alabama Art Commission and Hibbard changed some details of the sculpture.

Dr. Francis Gaines, president of Washington and Lee University, will deliver the address dedicating the statue. Montgomery last was host to the national U. D. C. convention in 1909, when 500 delegates attended.

Robbers Leave Clues, Their Own Photographs

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 17.—(AP) When two young men slugged and robbed Walter Acady, a commercial photographer, they left the best possible clue to their identities—their photographs.

After posing for their pictures last night, the men knocked Acady down, snatched $9 from him and fled. Acady developed the prints and turned them over to police.

Pretty Divorcee, 23, Is Murdered in Illinois

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Nov. 17.—(AP)—The body of an attractive 23-year-old divorcee, her skull crushed, was found early today in a hedge on the northern outskirts of this university city after an anonymous telephone caller notified police a girl was "lying in the bushes." Chief of Police Clyde Davis said the girl, Auburn-haired Mary Catherine Elliott, of Decatur, Ill., had been killed with a brick and criminally assaulted. A blood-stained brick was found 60 feet from the body.

Miss Elliott, divorced a year ago, was employed here in a dress shop. She was en route home from work when she was attacked.

Mayor-Elect Will Address College Group

LeCraw, Former Evening School Student, To Speak.

Principal speaker for the Georgia Evening College annual homecoming banquet Wednesday night will be Mayor-Elect LeCraw, former Evening College student. The banquet, traditionally held on Thanksgiving eve, will bring together students, alumni and faculty members in the outstanding event of the school year.

Dinner will be served at 7 o'clock in the ballroom of the Ansley hotel. Louis T. Bates, former dean of men of the Evening College, will act as toastmaster. Dr. George M. Sparks, president of the Evening College, will introduce LeCraw.

Gordon B. Brooke, Retail Credit Company official, will present the company's annual $100 award to the freshman who during the 1939-40 school year made the highest scholastic average at the college.

Honored guests for the banquet include Ben T. Hulet, state commissioner of labor, and Mrs. Hulet; L. R. Siebert, secretary, board of regents of the University System of Georgia, and Mrs. Siebert; W. Wilson Noyes, treasurer, board of regents, and Mrs. Noyes; Dr. J. Curtis Dixon, vice-chancellor of University System, and Mrs. Dixon; Dean W. Vernon Skiles, Georgia School of Technology, and Mrs. Skiles, and Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm H. Bryan.

Chairman of the homecoming committee is Frank Carter. Serving with him are Wallace Norris, Frank DiCristina, Jim Freeman, Britt Sanders and Harold Duncan. Under the direction of John D. Hoffman, the Evening College Glee Club will entertain the group with several selections. A dance will follow the dinner, with music being furnished by a local orchestra.

Hancock, of Atlanta.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at the Holy Comforter Episcopal church with the Rev. Dr. Woolsey Couch officiating. Burial will be in West View cemetery under the direction of J. Austin Dillon Company.

Tuberculosis Rate of Death Here 3d in U. S.

Atlanta Has Highest Mortality for Cities of Same Class.

Atlanta's tuberculosis death rate for 1939 was the highest in the nation in cities of its population class and the third highest in the United States, the New York Tuberculosis and Health association reported yesterday.

Deaths from the white plague in the corporate limits of Atlanta were nearly 300, or 97 per 100,000, the report showed. Only two cities—San Antonio and Memphis—reported higher figures. In San Antonio, the toll was 153 per 100,000 population and in Memphis, 103.

Although the report gave no reason for the excessively high number of deaths here, Dr. J. C. Burch, superintendent of the Battle Hill sanatorium, indicated last night that "inadequate hospital facilities and the large Negro population" are generally believed responsible.

Only 256 beds. "We have only 256 beds in Atlanta," Dr. Burch explained, "whereas we should have many times that number." "Studies by the Tuberculosis association have shown that for every death in a city, there are 10 active cases. With nearly 300 deaths in 1939, that would indicate there are approximately 3,000 active cases in Atlanta.

"Of that number, at least one-fourth should be hospitalized. To do that, more than 700 beds would be necessary."

Because tuberculosis deaths are "generally declining," however, 400 beds would probably suffice for the city. Had the recent bond issue passed, the funds would have been available for such an increase, the doctor pointed out.

A factor in the large death rate here is the Negro population of nearly 100,000.

"Negroes have little resistance to the disease," he explained, "and seldom seek treatment until it is too late. A lack of proper diet among many of the Negro race renders them easy victims."

The city's climate has little to do with the death rate, Dr. Burch declared, and if treated in time, a victim can recover here just as well as anywhere else.

Relief Not Enough.

Unemployment here has done much to keep the toll heavy, he pointed out, for the assistance offered by relief agencies is not sufficient to properly feed and house, the doctor said. Those lacking the proper diets are the disease's first victims.

Although the city's death rate was high last year, the doctor indicated that the toll is decreasing here as elsewhere.

Where once the dread germs were treated with plenty of rest, food and fresh air, surgery is now being used with excellent results.

In advanced cases, an entire diseased lung can be collapsed with successful results.

The patient is easily able to adapt himself to the use of that one lung.

In less serious cases, a lung can be temporarily collapsed until the germs are destroyed.

Cadet's Rifle, Family Car Have Same Number

Cadet Donald Durham at Wentworth Military Academy at Lexington, Mo., thought there was something familiar about his rifle serial number (532645), but he didn't find out what it was until his family visited him recently. The number on the license plates of the family car was 533645.

The steps leading gradually to the outbreak of the two World Wars—the diplomatic background, and the causes and results of these backstage diplomatic moves—are visualized for you in the "Twentieth Century World Histo-Graph," now ready for you at The Constitution Service Bureau.

This large chart, printed in colors, sets out all the principal contemporary events of the world since the year 1900. It includes histories of Latin-America, the United States, Europe, Africa and Asia.

It pictures the panorama of the march of world events. It constitutes a handy historical reference—history of our times at a glance.

Step by step the rise of totalitarianism is outlined, from Kaiser Wilhelm's ambition to create a "Mitteleuropa" and the "Drang Nach Osten" (drive to the East), to Adolf Hitler's actual accomplishment of this dream.

Every Studio Has Fighting Film Ready

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 17.—Every major studio has at least one fighting film ready to go. James Cagney stars in "Captain Ulysses Smith" for Warners. It's about a meek little bank clerk who is called up as a captain in the National Guard. Warners also have "Night Hawk" (RAF) on the production sheet. . . . Paramount is employing Buddy de Sylva to write a musical, "Caught in the Draft," with Bob Hope as head rookie. . . . At Twentieth Century-Fox we are getting "Rise and Shine" with John Payne being tested for the soldier lead. And "The Eagle Flies Again" (about the American airman in the RAF) with Don Ameche and Henry Fonda. . . . Walter Wanger is doing a film on the same subject and wants Fox to drop their picture. He says he thought of the idea first.

Maureen O'Sullivan would like to return to Husband John Farrow in Canada after the completion of her "Maise" stint. But Metro has another Tarzan set to go, and Maureen will have to stay. Johnny Weissmuller is currently dieting for his tree-swinging role. . . . It takes a lot to make Eleanor Powell give up. She is still weak from her serious operation of several months ago, but is training for her re-entry into films, working two hours a day at her dance routines. When she is well, Eleanor practices four to five hours daily. . . . So late for Eleanor to get back her lead in "Ziegfeld Girl," but she's hoping for top spot in the next "Broadway Melody," which should start in February or March. . . . Frank Morgan has finally won his fight at Metro for radio work. He will soon head a weekly program.

James Roosevelt is in the army now, but will keep a long-distance rein on his "Pot o' Gold" picture, due to start in December, unless Jimmy Stewart is also called to the colors. Meanwhile, Paulette Goddard, who co-stars with Stewart, is hiding her reporting from the severance of her ties with Chaplin. After "Pot o' Gold," Paulette works with Charles Boyer in "Hold Back the Dawn." She is also testing—so is Dorothy Lamour—for the feminine lead in "Caught in the Draft." . . . Douglas Fairbanks' refusal to appear in "The American Vagabond" is good news for Brian Donlevy, who steps up from chief supporting role to top spot. Walter Brennan gets Brian's former part.

Jane Wyatt is in process of being discovered again by Hollywood. You remember she starred with Ronald Colman in "Lost Horizon" and then dropped from film view. She did a couple of pictures at Republic, but to bring herself back to the attention of major studios, Jane appeared locally in the play, "Quiet, Please." She immediately received a call from Fox for a screen test. . . . That reminds me of Gloria Swanson, who soon appears in a New York play. Every talent scout from Hollywood will attend the opening—and if Gloria is a success, she will be invited back for another try at film fame.

Robert Taylor is in technicolor for "Billy, the Kid." . . . Following "Men of Boys' Town" and preceding "The Yearling," Spencer Tracy will star in "Tortilla Flat." Spencer had also wanted the lead in Steinbeck's "The Red Pony," but Metro lost it to Lewis Milestone, who will direct and produce. Most of "The Red Pony" will be shot on Steinbeck's ranch. . . . Anne Shirley's first on her new R. K. O.-Radio contract is "I Married a Cheat," and, by the way, before Anne signed the new deal she insisted on a written promise of no more "Anne of Green Gables" series. . . . Gary Cooper's vacation is extending over to next January, which means another postponement of "Sergeant X." . . .

A disappointment for Walter Brennan is the news that Charlie Chaplin plays "Jeeter Lester" in Zanuck's "Tobacco Road." The last time I talked with Walter, he thought he had the part—and was excited about it. But you are never sure of a role in Hollywood until the camera is turning.

The Kiddies' Choice for Christmas

By ALICE BROOKS.

Youngsters will be delighted with these crocheted bunny slippers! And you will, too, for the speed with which you can do them means none of the toils need be neglected. You'll be sure that the best girl who shares your big game tickets is reigning belle of the football special if you wire her a novel muff corsage. This one combines large yellow chrysanthemums with daisy chrysanthemums and croton leaves. Choose ribbons in your school colors, of course.

MY DAY: Snow Covered City Is Pretty Sight

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

CHICAGO, Ill., Friday.—We drove right into a midwinter snowstorm last night. As I went into the city in Kenosha, Wis., it seemed as though hardly perceptible ice particles were flying through the air. When we came out an hour and a quarter later, snow lay on all the streets.

This lecture was given for the Teachers' Union. In spite of the weather, the auditorium in the high school was filled and everything went off with a precision which delighted the soul of this lecturer. We actually began two minutes ahead of time, and the question period, announced to last 20 minutes, closed in exactly 20 minutes.

As I came out, a group of young people waited for autographs. Among them was a crippled boy who had had himself wheeled over in his chair. Snow or no snow, his idol is the President and he wasn't going to miss an opportunity to give Miss Thompson or myself his book with the request that the President sign it. We are taking it back to Washington to await some auspicious time when the President isn't snowed under with work and can autograph the book.

After the lecture, we went to the Y. M. C. A. building, so that I had an opportunity to meet many of the people interested in sponsoring the lecture. We started back to Chicago a little before 10 o'clock in what was by that time a real snowstorm. The snow gave a mysterious and rather enchanted air to the city. The houses around one of the squares looked comfortable and inviting with the lights shining out of the windows on the snow. It was a pleasant custom, for it gives a sense of welcome to those who may happen to have to wander in the dark outside.

We were back at the Hotel Stevens at 11:45 and enjoyed a mid-night supper. In fact, yesterday we reversed all of our usual hours for meals and had no lunch save the proverbial English tea with an egg. We had no dinner and a midnight supper.

We woke this morning to find Chicago covered with snow. My windows, which look out on the lake, framed a gray picture of clouds hanging over gray water. The snow is not falling any longer, and so I think we will find our drive this afternoon to Princeton, Ill., easy. In the meantime, four large envelopes of mail awaited us here from Washington and I think we will waste no time during the day.

Greece still seems to be holding her own. Heroism is always a thrilling thing to read about. This little nation's defense and the remarkable fight put up by the British ship against such tremendous odds, which saved so many of the convoy's ships, must make us proud of that quality in human beings which makes them able to rise above all selfish fears and interest and do their duty in the face of danger and death.

A Variety of Inexpensive Gifts To Make for Christmas

Christmas presents are no problem when you can make such a variety of gifts easily, at little cost!

To give you an idea, here—for that special friend—is a replica of an expensive Early American tray. And who wouldn't love the cute but useful "Mending Maid"?

Get a black tray, if possible, or give a plain tin tray a coat of black enamel.

A simple way to transfer your pattern to the tray is to cut it out, lay it on the tray and follow its outlines with your brush. Use gold for the stems and acorn cups, silver for the leaves and nuts, then fill in solidly with paint. The handy little "Mending Maid" starts life as a clothespin. For her head you wrap a ball of cotton in a six-inch square of muslin and tie this over the clothespin. Sew on a fresh piece of muslin for the face and give it a coat of show card paint. When dry, paint on features and sew on orange yarn for the hair.

Her dress you can cut from black oilcloth, following a simple pattern. Scallop and buttons are orange oil paint. Then from white oilcloth make a tiny apron for needles and thimble and also a pocket for spools of thread, which you conceal beneath her skirt. Or how would you like to make a stunning smoking set from—wouldn't you guess—tin cans? Or a gay cocktail or tea apron from a bandana?

Complete directions for these and many other unusual gifts are given in our new 40-page booklet, New Ideas for Hand-Made Gifts. Has patterns for "Mending Maid" and tray. Tells how to make attractive needlepoint bookends, Victorian footstool, painted coasters, butterfly bedroom slippers. In all, 31 charming gifts!

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, NEW IDEAS FOR HAND-MADE GIFTS, to Home Institute, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

1940 Belles Wear Fresh Blossoms

From the minute the "football special" pulls out of the station until bacon and eggs after the big prom, the favored belles will tell a story of the season's newest fashions in fresh flower corsages. Romantic Edwardian bouquets and, modernistic petal arrangements that transform familiar blossoms will share honors in creating a glamorous picture of the "big date."

For dancing the night after the big game, headresses of fresh flowers take the fashion spotlight. Nineteen-forty belles are tying fragrant blossoms on their up-swept curls with velvet ribbons. Full-blown red roses, orchids, rubrum lilies, gardenias or carnations are popular for flower bonnets. Petals are glued to ribbons to hold these headresses secure. Wristlets of fresh flowers to match the bonnet are recommended to impress any sophisticated belle.

Wherever the crowds climb aboard the train to the stadium, fragrant blossoms are blooming gayly on bonnets, muffs and choker necklaces. Epauettes of gardenias or tiny chrysanthemums dramatize broad shoulder lines. Tight clusters of fragrant roses and carnations fringed with petal designs are a popular novelty; gay colored ribbons proclaim college loyalty. Belles with wasp waists pin their fresh flowers proudly at the belt line. Toggles of rose or carnation petals are a delight to sophisticated belles and surprisingly long lasting, too. A fraternity pin arrangement is a college favorite which has one corsage of red and white carnations or white and yellow chrysanthemums attached by a gold chain to a smaller one. Scroll arrangements of orchids and rubrum lilies are pinned at the throat of collarless fur coats; and twin corsages proclaim glamour girl standing.

Even if your favorite beau doesn't meet you till you arrive at the college station, it's no excuse for not enjoying your corsage on the football special. All the very newest styles in flower arrangements can be wired everywhere in the country. Nowadays the most popular flowers are sold in small towns as well as large ones, because modern methods of breeding and shipping have bled the life span of your favorite blooms.

Chrysanthemums continue to hold top honors as "football specials." Any girl will cheer with double enthusiasm if you wire clashing bouquets of large yellow "mums" combined with tiny ones against a background of brilliant-hued autumn leaves. If you wish, the florist can attach your college letter right in the heart of the flower as though it had grown there.

Even a spoiled glamour girl will be intrigued with one of the new modernistic spray arrangements of gardenias combined with shining green croton leaves with odd red and white veinings that appear hand painted. Smart stadium bouquets are attached to canes and umbrellas. They may be transferred later into shoulder bouquets for the tea dance after the game.

There's Too Little Vitamin B In Average American Diet

By Ida Jean Kain.

If the menu maker could keep pace with the scientific advances in nutrition, her family would benefit much more promptly from the invaluable discoveries and experiments constantly in process. Such a wealth of up-to-the-minute information was pooled by leading doctors, scientists and dietitians at the annual convention of the American Dietetic Association in New York City recently. For the next few days I shall try to pass along some of the high points.

Inasmuch as "it is becoming more and more evident that the average American diet does not provide optimum amounts of the B vitamins for grade A health," we'll lead off with a condensation of the discussion by Dr. Norman Jolliffe, assistant professor of clinical medicine at New York university and chief of the medical service at Bellevue hospital, who is one of the foremost authorities on the B complex.

Because of the widespread use of refined flours and cereals coupled with the excessive use of sugar, syrup, candies, alcohol and soft drinks, Dr. Jolliffe maintains that only a small safety margin in the B vitamins is afforded by the average diet. There is an impressive list of the Vitamin B factors—and it's growing steadily in length and importance. But if the diet is deficient in one, it is quite likely to be deficient in the other.

Dr. Jolliffe is convinced that a serious Vitamin B1 deficiency is to be suspected among low income groups, persons with pronounced food idiosyncrasies, and among alcohol addicts. Alcohol contains no vitamins. Even when an otherwise adequate diet is followed, he points out, the amounts of vitamin-free alcohol consumed may be sufficient to lower the vitamin-calorie ratio significantly. In addition to the smaller consumption of high vitamin foods, there may be an impaired utilization of the vitamin. On a previous occasion, this authority recommended the use of milk as a chaser—one glass of milk for every ounce of whisky—which would not only assure more vitamins in the diet but would also act as a buffer for the digestive system.

Eyelash Pomade Encourages Growth

By Winifred Ware.

Beautiful eyes can lend loveliness to a face not otherwise noted for its beauty. They are a woman's loveliest feature and properly made up eyes enhance her general appearance and increase the sparkle and glow of her eyes.

Her lashes, for instance, will do for her eyes what a frame does for a picture. Thus, the importance of long, thick, silky lashes. Women are constantly on the lookout for a harmless preparation which tends to make the lashes grow and which thickens them. Mascara, of course, has the tendency to make the lashes look darker and thicker and longer, but it has no permanent effect.

We found a little jar of pomade the other day and thought perhaps you might like to give it a trial. It's a soft, pleasantly scented cream for the eyelashes which if used regularly will keep them in a good, healthy condition and encourage them to grow. And the lovely thing about this cream is its suitability for daytime wear.

For that soft, moist look—and that's the way you like the lashes—this cream is hard to beat. Apply the cream smoothly and evenly; it has a very softening effect on the lashes and yet it is not greasy. Again before retiring, use another application of the cream and leave it on over night. It won't be long before you can tell a marked difference in the natural appearance of your eyelashes.

Call me, and I'll give you the name of this pomade and the price. Write Winifred Ware at The Constitution if you don't live in Atlanta, and be sure to enclose a stamped envelope.

THE WOMAN'S QUIZ

Q. How much thread is in a pair of silk stockings?
A. From 1,500 to 2,000 yards in a pair of 45-gauge hose.
Q. How may the stiffening be restored to limp taffeta?

A. Sponge the silk on the wrong side with a solution of one-half teaspoon of borax in half a pint of warm water. Be sure that the borax is completely dissolved. When the silk is nearly dry, iron it on the wrong side with a moderately hot iron.

Q. What is the function of calcium and phosphorus in the diet?
A. In combination they constitute a large proportion of the teeth and bones.

Q. What is the difference between the Dick and the Schick tests?
A. The Dick test measures susceptibility to scarlet fever and the Schick test is for diphtheria.

Injection Treatment Is Modern Choice

By Dr. William Brady.

In a survey of the treatment of hemorrhoids (piles) made by Dr. N. J. Kilbourn (Annals of Surgery, April, 1934) the replies of 293 protologists in the United States and Europe to a confidential questionnaire tabulated thus: In 36,468 cases treated by operation there were 11 deaths, serious postoperative hemorrhage in 183 cases, subsequent stricture in 68 cases, recurrence (subsequent attacks of piles or continuation of old complaint) in 148 cases.

Speaking of recurrence in relation to hemorrhoids (piles) it is well to remember that removal or obliteration or "cure" of one or more piles which are causing present trouble does not immunize the patient against subsequent development of other piles—the patient is just as likely to have piles at any time in the future as is any one else. Hence "recurrence" after an interval of months or years of freedom or comfort hardly indicates failure of treatment.

In 26,262 cases treated by injection there were no deaths, serious post injection hemorrhage in 45 cases, subsequent stricture in one case, recurrence in 966 cases.

At the time this survey was made the ambulant or injection treatment was still a new departure, to a large portion of the general profession, and many practitioners who were honest but dumb were still frowning upon the injection treatment or even advising patients not to submit to it and urging them to enter hospital for the radical operation. In the six years since Kilbourn published his findings the injection treatment of hemorrhoids and other rectal troubles has advanced extraordinarily in technique and popularity. Today no physician who is abreast of progress and has the best interest of his patient at heart would attempt to deny that the method is the method of choice in every case, unless there happens to be some exceptional or unusual complication which warrants more radical treatment.

Farm Family Has a Lot Of Hope

By Caroline Chatfield.

Dear Miss Chatfield: Is there any hope for a family that has plenty but through poor management stays in debt and enjoys nothing? We have a large farm, a better than ordinary country home with every convenience in it. I attend a garden, can 500 quarts of fruit and vegetables yearly, keep 200 chickens as well as cows. So you see we don't have to buy many things to eat. We are always behind on payments for everything. We never have any cash. If I ask my husband for a dollar he behaves as if I were committing a crime. In spite of everything we have there is always the feeling of straining to make ends meet and embarrassment over obligations that haven't been met on time. It's a case of "water, water everywhere and not a drop to drink."

FARMER'S WIFE.

Answer: Sister, every day has his day and this is unquestionably the farmer's day. Never before has there been such a wealth of information for the farm, the farmer and the farmer's wife as today is let loose in unending stream on radio (every network), in newspapers and magazines, farm journals and government leaflets. Why, listen and look and you almost decide that Utopia with peace and plenty for all is located right down on the farm.

Of course, it listens and reads easier than it works out. Anybody that knows anything about the land knows it takes its toll of the people that live on it. Love it as they may, living from it. But the point is that now is never before those who are willing to work, yet have no imagination, have this important commodity supplied to them free of charge.

Is there hope for the farm family that has plenty yet stays in debt? Yes, verily. Hope is being pushed at them in the print, through the air; food for thought, sparks to kindle the imagination, inspiration for the women and children and some good spankings for the head men on the farms who go on as their fathers and their fathers' fathers, with antiquated methods and bum steers.

Mona Makes a Scene, Publicly Accuses Glory of Trying To Get Allan Back

SYNOPSIS.

Glory Stevens tears off her wedding gown, leaving the bride party waiting at the church, and just catches a train for Los Angeles and Hollywood. Since she was a little girl she has wanted to be an actress like her mother who died when Glory was 13. On the train she meets Helen Jamison who has won some recognition as a character actress. She advises Glory to return home, then, calling herself a fool, suggests that she take an inexpensive apartment next to her. Glory makes the studio rounds daily until her money is gone, then Helen suggests to Scottie Weston, her own agent, that he discourage the girl and send her home. Instead he gets her a job in the Sunset studio wardrobe department, but the first day a pin in a jacket sleeve scratches Mona Greer and that temperamental star has Glory discharged. Scottie sends her to dramatic school and she is seen constantly with him at important night spots wearing gowns designed by William Van Lunningham, Sunset's chief designer. After Mark Spencer, Scottie's young lawyer, meets Helen Rhodes, popular movie lover, plays with her in her screen test and they fall in love. She gets small parts in two pictures and moves to a small apartment. Allan Rhodes suddenly and Glory is distracted by his silence. Re-entraining, he gives her an engagement ring, saying he went to Mexico to see Mona on location and tell her he loved her. Mona announces her engagement to Allan in the newspapers. Allan assures her this is a ruse, then Scottie tells her Mona and Allan have been married in Yuma. Now go on with the story.

INSTALLMENT XXIV.

"Allan Rhodes is to be co-starred with you. I knew you wouldn't like it, Glory, but it's swell box-office."

She said bitterly, "Yes, I suppose it's good publicity for Allan Rhodes to play opposite his jilted sweetheart!"

"You don't still care for that heel, do you?"

"Certainly not!" Glory answered, but in her heart she was wondering how she could do it. How could she be with Allan day after day and not love him? How could she play those love scenes and keep her emotions locked within her? She couldn't even bear to think about him, much less see him day after day, work with him. How ironic that her love for Allan must be relied on for the screen. The man she had sworn to forget would be beside her. The emotions she tried to repress in real life must be displayed before the camera.

"I can't do it!" Glory said desperately. "It's too much to expect."

"Listen, Glory. You're an actress, and Allan Rhodes is just another actor. You've got to look at it that way. Don't let your personal feelings enter into it."

But how could she help it? How could any girl play love scenes with a man who had jilted her, and be conscious of no emotion? It would be torture, sheer torture to be Allan's screen sweetheart and watch him go home every night after work—to another woman. Yes, Glory supposed dully, it would be good publicity all right. The public would be amused to see Allan and Glory brought together on the screen. And Allan was a sure-fire box-office attraction. She was lucky to have a chance to play with him. But could she bear the sight of that handsome face, the sound of his compelling voice?

She did not have to wait long to find out. For that evening, as she sat with Helen and Scottie in a popular night club, she became suddenly conscious of Allan Rhodes sitting across the room. Immediately everyone else was blotted out. All she could see was this handsome man she had loved so much. He looked thin and unhappy. Her heart went out to him. But when she saw Mona join him a moment later, he became nothing but Mona's husband. He didn't love Glory. He couldn't have loved her . . .

"Chin up!" Scottie advised, following her glance.

"Glory smiled obediently, but how it hurt to see Allan with Mona. Then suddenly Allan noticed her. As he rose, shaking off the restraining arm of his wife, and crossed the room, Glory felt as if she would faint. He spoke briefly to Scottie and Helen, but his gaze was riveted upon Glory.

"I understand we are going to work together," he said. She nodded dumbly.

"It's going to be a great picture," Scottie put in. "A fine chance for Glory to show what she can do."

"I'm going to give her all the help I can," Allan promised. If he only wouldn't be so sweet, Glory thought, feeling all her defense crumble under the tenderness of his tone.

Mona had followed him and, drawing his arm through hers, she said icily, "I don't believe I've met your friends."

She knew Scottie, of course, but Allan introduced her to Helen and Glory. Mona's green eyes blazed as her eyes swept insolently over Glory Stevens.

"Oh, yes," she said in a distant cutting voice. "I think I do remember you. You worked in the wardrobe department once but they fired you the first day . . ."

Glory was trembling. Allan looked furious but Scottie Weston rose and said, "Okay, Mona. How about a dance?"

Mona turned on him, "Oh no, you don't. You can't shut me up like that," and then back to Glory.

"I must say, Miss Stevens, you have come a long way, but of course it's fairly obvious how you got there . . ."

"How dare you?" Glory retorted angrily.

"And now," Mona continued shrilly so that all those at the surrounding tables could hear, "now I understand you are going to be in a picture with my husband. Well, it was very clever of you to manage that. But not clever enough. You can't get Allan back that way, or any other!"

All eyes were upon them. Glory's cheeks were flaming from the insult. A light flashed and she knew that some ever-present photographer had caught the scene. What a nice tidbit this would make for the morning gossip column.

Helen seized her arm and led her quickly into the dressing room.

"That cat!" she cried.

White-faced, Glory sank down before one of the mirrored tables. "Oh Helen, how dared she? He's hers now! Isn't that enough?"

"She must be afraid of you, Glory! She certainly gives you plenty of credit . . . Better put on some rouge, honey. You look like a ghost."

With shaking fingers, Glory applied more make-up.

"If she really has so much influence, I'm surprised she would allow the studio to do it."

"She can't dictate to the studio about anything like that. She knows it's well publicity, but she wants to make it as unpleasant as possible for you."

Glory rose. "Let's go back! I certainly don't want her to think I'm in here crying."

"Atta girl!" Helen approved.

They returned to their table but Mona and Allan were not to be seen.

"They've gone," Scottie assured Glory. "Wow! What a scene! Allan should have had more sense than to come over here and speak to you."

But now Glory rose to his defense. "Why not? After all, if we are going to work together in a picture, there is no reason why he can't speak to me."

"He looks like a wreck," Scottie commented. "I hear he's gone in for a lot of heavy drinking lately."

Poor Allan! How unhappy he must be. Glory wished she had agreed to see him that night he telephoned. There might be some way out for them even yet. She couldn't imagine Mona Greer ever giving him up but Glory wished she had at least heard what he had to say. Well, she might have a chance to find out while they were working on the new picture.

She told herself she had tried to be fair to Mona, and this was the gratitude she got! Mona accusing her publicly of trying to get Allan back! She'd have reason to say that if she didn't watch her step. Because from now on Glory Stevens wasn't going to consider Mona. Mona hadn't played fair, why should she? Glory told herself she was tired of taking it on the chin, of being falsely accused, of being the victim of Mona Greer's rages. She, Glory, was going to be a star now, too! She wouldn't have to take anything from any one!

"And I won't!" Glory resolved. "From now on I'm going to have something to say about my own life. And if Allan Rhodes wants to see me I'm going to see him! Continued Tomorrow."

Your Horoscope for Today

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Chirologist.

What today means to you if you were born between:

March 21st and April 19th (ARIES)—If it is possible to postpone the beginning of affairs until 9:15 a. m. has passed, for the remainder of the day seems filled with more favorable influences. Before 9:15 a. m. impulsiveness and rashness may be easily noted, and new ideas started now are likely to take a turn that you may seem powerless to prevent. After 9:15 a. m. and continuing throughout the entire day favors practically all undertakings.

April 20th and May 20th (TAURUS)—During the morning hours you are likely to have a cramped feeling in the things you are attempting and in the afternoon a strong desire to do something about it all. If you give way to either of these impulses and start new and untried projects, you are likely to encounter many hindrances. An excellent day to stick to routine.

May 21st and June 20th (GEMINI)—An excellent day for business, shipping, legal and educational matters, for tackling old and hard jobs and for reaching stable conclusions. The best aspects of the day operate previous to 3 p. m.

June 21st and July 22nd (CANCER).—Your business and personal interests are likely to be very active to your benefit today. Business in general should respond actively, and a fine bright start may be made where finances and business are concerned, especially in the period previous to 3:30 p. m.

July 23rd and Aug. 22nd (LEO)—Before 3:15 p. m. favors work that is fast, unusual, fervent and dealings with people who are determined. After 3:15 p. m. is a favorable period for seeking favors.

Aug. 23rd and Sept. 22nd (VIRGO)—The period between 9:10 a. m. and 6:37 p. m. favors making rapid progress in necessary lines of work, and in legal, educational and literary interests. After 6:37 p. m. favors a conservative policy along all lines.

Sept. 23rd and Oct. 22nd (LIBRA)—This should be a very pleasant and favorable day until 5:51 p. m. for refined work, affairs that are thought of as being of a social nature. After 5:51 p. m. brings a tendency toward extravagance and exaggeration and is a time to be especially cautious in all things.

Oct. 23rd and Nov. 21st (SCORPIO)—The entire day is most favorable for affairs that take a long time to mature, or those things which require persistent effort may meet unexpected success, and dealings with older people are likely to be more exciting than expected.

Nov. 22nd and Dec. 21st (SAGITTARIUS)—Business and personal interests are likely to be very active throughout the day. Business in general should respond actively. The best aspects of the day operate before 3:30 p. m. The period past 6 p. m. favors social affairs and sports.

Dec. 22nd and Jan. 19th (CAPRICORN)—Before 1:27 p. m. favors a cautious attitude in money matters. Old ideas and dealings with thought people, especially in works connected with the ground, produce and conservative affairs, may be brought to light during the entire day with unexpected benefits.

Jan. 20th and Feb. 18th (AQUARIUS).—Your mind will be very active today, so that you will be able to create new ways of doing things and you may have an impulse to start off in some new endeavor. Dealings with conservative people or affairs that pertain to literary efforts should be consummated successfully.

Feb. 19th and March 20th (PISCES).—Favorable vibrations operate throughout the entire day, making this an auspicious time for all important business affairs. A favorable day for dealings with superiors and for meeting new friends.

THEATER—One of the famous married couples of the screen, Tyrone Power and Annabella, will play the starring roles in an hilarious radio adaptation of the comedy, "Rage of Manhattan" on the "Radio Theater" hour over WGST at 8 o'clock tonight.

Annabella, Mrs. Power in private life, takes the part of Nicole, a beautiful French girl, who finds herself stranded in New York city when the night club where she has been appearing, is closed. She tries to get work as a model and an agency offers her a job posing in something less than scant attire. At first she recoils, but unemployed artists must eat like other folks, so she takes the address of the studio where she is to go and pose. In her excitement she gets the wrong address and walks into the office of James Trevor, played by Tyrone Power.

CONCERT—Richard Crooks, leading tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will sing Grieg's "I Love You" as his featured solo on the regular broadcast of the Monday Concert program to be heard over WSB at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

Mr. Crooks will be assisted in the half-hour concert by the symphony orchestra of 70 members under the direction of Alfred Wallenstein. The orchestral feature of the program will be a performance of the Dance of the Comedians, from "The Bartered Bride," by Smetana.

TELEPHONE HOUR—James White, tenor, and Francis White, lovely young soprano, will sing the old favorite "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms," as a duet to highlight the vocal part of the Telephone Hour during its broadcast. The program to be heard over WSB at 7 o'clock tonight.

The singing stars will be assisted by the symphonic orchestra and chorus under the direction of Donald Voorhees. The orchestral highlight will be a performance of the Finale Symphony in F Minor, by Tchaikowsky.

OPERA—Jarmila Novotna, Czech soprano; Tito Schipa, Italian tenor, and Alexander Sved, Hungarian baritone, headline a cast of international favorites when the Chicago Opera Company presents Verdi's "La Traviata" over WATL at 9:30 o'clock tonight.

Maurice Abravanel will direct the orchestra for the performance. The third and fourth acts of this long opera will be broadcast. Miss Novotna, who sings the role of tragic Violetta, is the daughter of a Czech banker and made her operatic debut in "Traviata" in Prague when she was 17 years old. Sved will sing the role of Giorgio Germont, rich uncle of Alfredo, Violetta's lover. The role of Alfredo will be played by Schipa.

Army Will Get

First of U. S. Draftees Today

71,000 Men Eligible for Service Have Volunteered.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(AP). The Army gets its first draftees tomorrow—two months and two days after President Roosevelt signed the nation's first peacetime conscription bill.

War department officials said that the initial group—only a small fraction of the 800,000 men to be called by next June 30 for a year's training—would be inducted in New England, at Chicago and at scattered points on the Pacific coast. Some other corps areas will begin receiving men Tuesday while in others the draftees will not be called until later.

Draftees will report to induction centers in all six of the New England states. Due to time difference, they probably will be the first in the nation to enter the army.

At Chicago, the Army said, its Sixth Corps area would swear in an even 100 men, the only ones to be called in Illinois this year. On the west coast, the 8th Corps area will begin induction of 1,630 men, a task which officials said would take until November 22.

The men in the 9th Corps area will be sworn in at Army stations in Sacramento, Los Angeles and San Francisco, Calif.; Fort Meade, Mont.; Portland, Ore.; Tacoma and Spokane, Wash.; Boise, Idaho, and either Cheyenne, Wyo., or Salt Lake City, Utah.

The Army originally expected to call about 30,000 men under the selective service program by December 1, but officials said this number had been reduced, largely because of the number of volunteers who had been accepted in the interim.

Draft officials said almost the entire number of men taken in on the first call under the draft program would be registrants who volunteered.

A poll of state selective service officials showed, they said, that approximately 71,000 men already classified and found eligible for immediate service had volunteered.

The men called tomorrow will get their first contact with the army at the induction stations. There they will undergo a physical examination—in which the Army doctors will check the findings of the examining physicians of the local draft boards.

From the center of the city Molotov breadbaskets—huge packages which break open as they near the earth, releasing clusters of small bombs—dropped through the murky skies, but observers could see no fires.

Barrage guns roared steadily as the high-flying Nazis droned across the city.

The air ministry and ministry of home security said that five British fighting planes were shot down in air fights today but that four of the pilots were safe.

The Sunday Times said today the most serious menace confronting Britain from the air was "the air blockade of the coast of Ireland."

The writer noted the sinking of the Empress of Britain and suggested these air raids on shipping constitute "the most vital and urgent problem of the war at present."

Now, the Japan Airways announced yesterday, the company's service from Japan proper to Formosa is being extended 1,730 miles to the southwest to Palau, in the Japanese mandate islands, over the area which Pan-American long has been flying in its San Francisco-Honolulu-Guam-Manila-Hongkong run.

The newspaper Asahi called attention to the fact the new route will pass over waters washing the shores of the Philippines and described the South Sea service as a "definite contribution to the strengthening of Japan's greater East Asia program."
